PRINCESS SORAYA
... broken heart

Names in the News

MANCHESTER — Lord Altrincham, stern watchdog of royal behavior, gave Princess Margaret a public scolding for shrinking from the attentions of the press and letting her mother fight the battle for her. The journalist peer wrote in The Guardian that if Margaret doesn't like publicity she can always give up her royal rank "and her princely salary."

He said an exchange of visits by the Queen and President Eamon de Valera of the Irish Republic may help bring a reconciliation between Ireland and Britain.

MILAN — Milan magazine Gente says Princess Soraya is trying to heal her heart in the sun after a broken American romance. The magazine linked the name of the former queen of Iran with that of American TV actor Hugh O'Brian.

EVERETT — Snohomish County Sheriff Bob Twitchell, convicted on two counts of allowing brothels to operate, was sentenced to 150 days in jail and ordered to pay costs of his trial.

RABAT — Moroccan police Thursday arrested Francisco Morillo, the Spanish captain of the yacht Price—in which 40 persons were feared to have drowned when it sank Wednesday—and accused him of transporting "clandestine emigrants."

CHICAGO — Adlai Stevenson, newly appointed U.S. ambassador to the UN, bade farewell to admiring Chicagoans, shook hands of hundreds, and promised to fight for an "honorable peace in the United Nations."

NEW YORK — Clyde Newton, a 39-year-old man who masqueraded as a doctor and pathologist in a Manhattan hospital for three years, was arrested as an impostor.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Academy Award-winning actor Ernest Borgnine sued Mexican actress Katy Jurado, for divorce, charging mental cruelty.

VANCOUVER — Vancouver Police Chief George Archer will retire next year.

NEW YORK — A judge Wednesday called former Guatemalan ambassador Maurice Rosal a betrayer of his family, government and religion and sentenced him to 15 years in prison for smuggling millions of dollars worth of heroin into the United States.

CHICAGO — Frank Sinatra and Ella Fitzgerald were named the nation's top male and female vocalists in Playboy magazine's 1961 jazz poll.

MONTE CARLO — Greek shipowner Aristotle Onassis has denied rumors reported in French papers that he and singer Maria Callas are about to be married.

LONDON — Famed leader singer Elena Gerhardt, who fled her native Germany in 1934 when the Nazis came to power, died in her London home Wednesday. She was 77.

QUEBEC CITY — Antonio Talbot took over the leadership of the Union Nationale party—the fifth such change in 16 months. He succeeds Yves Frenette.

MANCHESTER (CP)—The Guardian says it looks as though Canada's proposals on Laos may prove to be the best, after all.

External Affairs Minister Green proposed that representatives of the three-power International Supervisory Commission should make an informal study of the situation as a prelude to further action.

The premier gave Soviet approval to a proposal by Prince Sihanouk of Cambodia for an East-West conference on Laos and urged that it be held "without delay."

U.S. 'Provocation' Charged in Laos

MOSCOW (UPI)—Soviet Premier Khrushchev has accused the Eisenhower administration of "provocative actions" in Laos leading to "direct intervention" in the southeast Asian state, the Tass news agency said.

The premier gave Soviet approval to a proposal by Prince Sihanouk of Cambodia for an East-West conference on Laos and urged that it be held "without delay."

Tass published details of a letter from Khrushchev to Pham Van Dong, premier of Communist North Viet Nam, expressing the "unwavering demand that the United States and some of its allies in the SEATO bloc should discontinue illegal military and other aid to the rebels opposing the constitutional government."

Wicks succeeded by Eric Martin

Health Minister Eric Martin has been named a member of the treasury board, a body which controls government expenditures. He succeeds former Labor Minister Lyle Wicks who was defeated in the September provincial election.

Federal Vote

Socreds Fielding Full Slate

OTTAWA (UPI)—The Social Credit party yesterday stood squarely on its "right-wing... reform" traditions and announced it would field a full slate of candidates in the next federal election, a contest it regarded largely as a fight between socialism and free enterprise.

The Socreds, meeting in the capital on the heels of the national Liberal rally, added to the simmering federal political atmosphere by announcing their plans for the next big contest. An "early election," they said, was "very possible because the longer Prime Minister Diefenbaker waits, the less his chances are."

The next election could be called anytime between now and March 31, 1963.

Russia Demands:

Oust Belgium From Africa

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—Russia demanded yesterday that the United Nations deprive Belgium of its administering power in the African trust territory from which Congolese troops attacked forces of ousted leftist premier Patrice Lumumba on New Year's Day.

Soviet Ambassador Valerian Zorin also suggested that the entire UN trusteeship system, which governs most of the world's remaining dependent areas, be abolished and "buried with the rest of the obsolete colonial system."

Russian Farm Troubles Preclude Aid to China?

LONDON (Reuters)—Shortcomings in Soviet agriculture are believed in usually well-informed quarters here to be the reason why Russia so far has failed to announce any large-scale aid for famine-stricken China.

Dissatisfaction of Soviet leaders with their agricultural policy is being spotlighted at a special session currently under way in Moscow of the Soviet Communist party central committee.

A general reorganization in Soviet agricultural policy is thought likely here to result from the central committee

Honey and Vinegar

HONEY is a more pleasant thing to swallow than vinegar and its effects are calculated to sweeten the palate. So it is with human relations. A friendly spirit, or at least one that is not vindictive, can be assumed to be a more persuasive influence than enmity.

This is one of the reasons advanced for admitting Red China to the United Nations, apart from the reality of Communist rule there which cannot be denied. It is argued with some warrant that if Red China were admitted to the world body its aggressive tendencies might be curbed because of its association with the UN, if only as a result of the contacts established and the fact that UN membership does cause its member states to have some regard for its opinions.

This is not a policy seemingly favored by the Liberals, whose foreign policy committee at their Ottawa rally this week advocated that South Africa should be expelled from the Commonwealth unless it alters its present apartheid policies. This of course is tantamount to an ultimatum, scarcely a statesmanlike approach to the South African problem.

It takes scant recognition of conditions to which Canadians are total strangers. It ignores also the large white community there which equally deplores present apartheid measures and who would be left out in the cold were the Liberal view to hold sway. If thrust outside the Commonwealth there would be small hope the Afrikaners would change their ways; inside it there would always remain the channels for persuasion and friendly advice. Elected governments do not last forever, and there is some slight easement of attitude already to be noted in the South African situation. Cast aside by its fellow Commonwealth members South Africa would not be amenable to their strictures.

By contrast a labor peer in Britain has suggested that Ireland be brought back into the Commonwealth and that ancient grudges be resolved. It is thought for one thing that there can be no end of partition in the Emerald Isle so long as one section of it is part of the Commonwealth and another remains outside. As with the UN and its members ameliorating influences can be brought to bear among fellows of the same institution.

Apparently this is not a view held by the policymakers of the Liberal Party in Canada, who prefer vinegar to honey.

Loophole in Make-Work Plan

BOTH Saanich and Esquimalt expect to benefit substantially from the federal-provincial winter works program—the former in connection with a major sewerage project and the latter through a sharing of the cost of the new ice rink. Esquimalt may be able to draw as much as $100,000 from the senior governments.

This is all very fine for the respective ratepayers, and the two councils certainly cannot be blamed for grasping the opportunity of financial assistance at a time when there are very heavy calls on local revenue. But is this quite in keeping with the spirit and intention of the federal plan for relief of seasonal unemployment?

It is a make-work scheme. The whole purpose of it is to induce or encourage local bodies to undertake projects which would provide extra work. The emphasis must be on the word "extra" because that is the way in which seasonal unemployment can be eased.

There is nothing to be gained, except by the municipalities concerned, from the expenditure of money allocated for unemployment relief on works which the municipalities would have to undertake anyhow. Saanich would have to go ahead with its sewer scheme whether or not grants were received from the federal and provincial governments. Esquimalt under a scheme approved by popular vote would proceed with the arena project regardless of the unemployment situation.

No doubt this application of funds intended for a different purpose is being duplicated in other parts of the country, and so Saanich, Esquimalt and any other local bodies with work lined up are entitled to claim grants. Nevertheless the fact that they can do so indicates a loophole in the plan. The good fortune of municipal taxpayers in some areas comes from a diversion of funds from the intended purpose of the federal government's emergency measure. This isn't "making" work.

Publicity Gets Action

THE cold light of publicity often accomplishes good results where formal negotiation in private fails. Thus the press publicity given to the cruelly unsatisfactory conditions at the Saanich dog pound has been a major factor in the framing of a plan to correct the situation by turning over operation to SPCA.

As is so often the case where publicity proves embarrassing to public officials, one member of the Saanich council doesn't like the line taken by the SPCA. Mr. Gregory C. Cook says he is "not happy that the SPCA tried this in the papers when they could have come to the council about it."

Councillor Cook should check the facts before making remarks like that. The local branch of the SPCA first brought conditions at the pound to the attention of the Saanich council away back last spring. No publicity was given then to the society's appeal to the council to give some thought to the suffering of animals held in the pound. Perhaps because of that the SPCA got absolutely nowhere. It wasn't until it became apparent that the council did not intend to do anything that the society disclosed the situation to the press.

Councillor Cook also was foolish to question "the authority of the SPCA to set themselves up as the sole and highest examining board when it comes to pounds." Apart from the fact that the society has certain statutory powers, it has years of experience in the construction and management of animal pounds. At present the SPCA is operating no fewer than 34 pounds in various parts of B.C. under agreements with municipalities, all of which find the arrangement infinitely preferable to running their own pounds.

Anyhow, the dogs of Saanich will be happy with the result of publicity, even if Councillor Cook finds it awkward.

Interpreting the News

U.K. Labor Breach Unhealed

By DAVE GANCIA, Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON — Three months after Britain's Labor party openly split at its annual conference, there is little sign that the breach is healing.

The pressure from fundamentalist Socialists for the resignation of leader Hugh Gaitskell, a right-of-centre moderate, is as great as ever.

The election to Parliament of Michael Foot, a volatile left-winger, provides a rallying point for radicals who want to be rid of Gaitskell.

As the manoeuvring for power goes on, a few serious political journals have come to the conclusion that some surgery is needed to restore the party's wholeness.

The weekly Economist doubts that Gaitskell has it in him "to show the right mixture of butchery without spiteness."

But the sober Political Quarterly feels this is essential. If heads must roll and if the party is to remain an effective political force, the heads must be those only of the extreme irreconcilables of the left.

Thus, and only thus, can the conflict be resolved.

The Political Quarterly traces the origin of party divisions to the constitution adopted at the 1919 conference. This marked victory over the Marxists by Fabian Socialists allied with the cautious trade unions.

Since then the party, "like the Anglican Church, the American Democrats, the Indian Congress and the Holy Roman Empire," has rested on a series of compromises between widely diverging views and interests.

Some Labor members, temperamentally more suited to oppose and criticize than to support, had their own brand of socialism to advocate and have tried to influence the party from within.

From a study of the party's performance since 1919, the quarterly concludes that a Labor government will be formed of men to the right of the party as a whole and practice policies to the right even of their own words while in opposition.

This challenge has produced a crisis that now threatens the existence of the Labor party, says the publication.

The party's present division arises from the fundamental differences over unilateral nuclear disarmament by Britain. Left-wing dissidents were able to amass enough support at the party conference to adopt a resolution calling for the unilateral move against the determined opposition of the official leadership.

Thinking Aloud Crisis Over Laos

"... of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

I SEE by the public prints that the drum-major of the Princess Patricia's is off to Edmonton to attend a special course on, if I may coin the art in one word, drum-majority. If he is the chap who made our hearts skip when he threw his stick high before the Queen in Beacon Hill Park, he is in no need of a refresher. He should be able to teach his colleagues a thing or two.

I should not demean a drum-major by calling his staff a drumstick. A drumstick is the splinter of wood that is handle to a candy-coated apple, or alternately the thin leg of a cooked fowl. It is thus highly improper to refer to his mace as a stick, and I withdraw the reference. A mace is a symbol of authority no less dominant on the parade ground than in parliament, and a drum-major's authority no one in his senses would question.

That other major-domo of the barracks square, the sergeant-major, I have discussed at length before. He is so filled with discipline, as one observer aptly put it, that he trembles like drawn elastic, although this is nothing to the trembling of the recruit who comes under his frowning eye. The sergeant-major is master of the parade ground and no one is likely to labor under any contrary illusion. But when the band strikes up and the parade moves off even the sergeant-major takes a back seat.

Here is where the drum-major shines. He is the ceremonial figure par excellence, the criterion of a regiment's musical performance. If the drum-major is full of swank, if he combines a stately air with adept staffwork and spectacular appeal, his elan is catching. The bandmen march as though they were kings of the castle and civilian onlookers rend the air with their applause. It is thus no light responsibility to be a drum-major.

Perhaps at this point one should note the difference between the drum-major and what has come to be the milady's imitation of his craft, the drum-majorette. The latter twirls both herself and her stick—hers is a stick—in a manner that titillates the spectators, no wonder in view of her short skirts, but which obviously would be unbecoming on the part of a drum-major. For all his splendid appearance a drum-major is as austere as a sergeant-major. The honor of the regiment rests in his hands. Just think for example of the humiliation should he toss his mace aloft and fail to catch it as it came down!

Why then call him a drum-major? I have never bothered to find out; although perhaps this does not bear too close scrutiny. I understand for instance that a drum, apart from being something one beats upon, was the name given long ago to a noisy social gathering, the resemblance stemming from the sounds of drum-beating and over-exuberant party-goers. And the more riotous of these affairs were called drum-majors. Offhand I would regard this as a slight on an ornamental figure without whom the army simply wouldn't be the same, but at least it can be said he has rescued the term from unflattering origin.

Nor, I suppose, is it essential that a drum-major be himself a drummer. Presumably the most ambitious among drummers do graduate to the lordly eminence of leader of the band. In fact to the leadership of his regiment, for on ceremonial occasions he is out in front as number one, the cynosure of all eyes. But I suspect that the true drum-major is one born instinctively to his craft and needs only the example of his majestic bearing, the expert manipulation of his mace, the inspiring influence of his swank, to fill the chests of those who follow on behind. And what a sight 27 drum-majors will be if they march in unison at this special Edmonton course.

Russia's Intentions Obscure

By ELISABETH BARKER, from London

THE year 1961 opened with a curious discord between Mr. Khrushchev's conciliatory expressions of goodwill and the rumblings of renewed international crisis over Laos. The world was left wondering whether to face the coming months with hope or with foreboding. In Britain, people were cautious but determined to work for every practicable improvement in relations between the West and the Soviet bloc.

Mr. Macmillan's New Year message to Mr. Khrushchev was constructive but realistic. He did not shrink the hard fact that 1960, which started so hopefully, had been a year of disappointment.

However, he did refer to Mr. Khrushchev's leading role in causing the collapse of the summit conference last May. Instead he called for a return to the spirit of moderation and mutual confidence in international relations, and for wider Anglo-Soviet exchanges in trade, science and culture and especially for freedom of information.

Mr. Khrushchev, on his side, was apparently eager to bury the past—particularly the summit fiasco. In his message to Mr. Macmillan he ignored it completely, but recalled with satisfaction his "useful meetings" with the prime minister during 1960. As for 1961, Mr. Khrushchev hoped for profitable co-operation in the solution of urgent international problems, especially disarmament.

To Mr. Kennedy, the United States president-elect, Mr. Khrushchev also sent a message of hope that Soviet-American relations in 1961 would be marked by goodwill and the desire for peace. Speaking in Moscow on New Year's Day he offered to bury the U-2 incident which he had used seven months earlier to prevent a summit conference and to bring Soviet-American relations to their nadir.

Mr. Khrushchev's motive behind his new year display of goodwill is uncertain. He has, of course, a personal stake—as he showed at the recent Moscow conference of Communist leaders—in vindicating his own interpretation of "peaceful co-existence" as a policy which at least allows the possibility of successful negotiation with the West.

He wants to prove that the fiasco of May, 1960, was exclusively the fault of President Eisenhower and is eager to convince the Communist world that the new president will be quite different from the old.

It is therefore likely that Mr. Khrushchev really does want to resume top-level contacts with the West. He has not, however, shown any readiness for compromise or concession.

On the key issue of Germany and Berlin his present slogan is "agreement in 1961, or else a separate treaty with East Germany depriving the three Western powers of all rights in Berlin." This is a bad basis for real negotiation.

On the more immediate issue of Laos as well, his intentions are obscure. Britain and Russia together have special duties towards Laos. These stem from the Geneva conference of 1954—one of the regrettably few postwar conferences which produced agreement between the West and the Communist powers.

Britain and Russia as co-chairmen retained continuing responsibility regarding fulfillment of the agreements on stopping conflict between the legitimate authorities and Communist-led forces in the three states of Indo-China—Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

Since 1954 Britain and Soviet Russia have consulted together—sometimes fruitlessly, sometimes usefully—about real or imagined threats to the 1954 agreements. The Laos agreement provided for integration of all citizens—including followers of the Communist-led Pathet Lao movement—in the national community through elections, and foresaw restoration of the legitimate government's authority throughout the country and incorporation of Pathet Lao forces in the national army.

An International Commission formed by India, Poland and Canada was established to supervise fulfillment of the agreement on the spot. By the summer of 1958 it seemed that this had been virtually achieved and the commission adjourned indefinitely. Unfortunately however, there was deep-seated mistrust and antagonism between the army and political leaders in Vientiane and the Pathet Lao, arising partly from the Viet Minh backing of the Pathet Lao which culminated in the recrudescence of the Pathet Lao insurrection in the summer of 1959. Since then there has been renewed conflict leading at times to widespread skirmishing and local fighting.

Every time the conflict becomes acute, tension rises between the Communist powers and the West. In the latest crisis, which began with a coup by a young army captain, Kong Lao, last August, a new and dangerous factor has been the Soviet supply of military aid to his forces.

Throughout the crisis Britain has been working, in consultation with her allies, to bring about a solution by diplomatic means. The British ambassador in Moscow has stressed the dangers of the situation to the Soviet deputy foreign minister. Britain has also asked the present Laotian government under Prince Boun Oum to agree to the recall of the International Supervisory Commission which might check the entry of foreign military aid.

More recently, the British Foreign Secretary has discussed with the United States Ambassador ways of achieving a political solution. Mr. Khrushchev's response to the British efforts will be a test of his intentions in 1961.

A Fifth Freedom

The Right To Work

By LEWIS MILLIGAN

WHAT can the government do about unemployment? Well, Mr. William Plummer, assistant Canadian director of the United Rubber Workers of America, has the solution. In a letter to the Toronto papers, he writes:

"It is high time we got to the crux of the problem—jobs for everyone—and there could be no false claims for unemployment insurance. There is an answer to every problem, but the desire to solve it must come first. The government of Canada is the only body which can put the machinery in motion to find a solution to unemployment." It is just as simple as that!

"What has happened," he asks, "to the Second World War promises for a new world—Freedom of Speech, Freedom of Religion, Freedom from Fear, Freedom from Want? Thank God I am not one of the unemployed who have probably found a fifth freedom, Freedom to Starve!"

The implication of those last three words is that the unemployed in Canada are starving. I immediately thought of the millions of people in India who are living in a perpetual state of starvation, compared with which unemployed Canadians are living in luxury. In Calcutta even men who are employed do not earn enough to provide themselves with more than a few handfuls of rice per day, and at night they sleep without bedding or covering on the hard sidewalks of the city. Shame on you, Mr. Plummer.

If we need a Fifth Freedom in Canada, it is Freedom to Work. Labor is organized and controlled, purposely to restrict hours of work. Overtime is rendered unprofitable for the employer through workers' demands for extra pay. And, like other restrictions and demands, this increases the cost and reduces the volume of production. All this raises prices and the cost of living. The result is a reduction of sales in the home market and loss of export trade. The end product is unemployment.

Even looking at the present situation from a selfish point of view, organized labor should see that its policy of curtailing work hours and periodically demanding higher wage rates and benefits is suicidal. The whole economy of industry, trade and commerce is kept in a perpetual state of uncertainty. Industrial projects are discouraged, building contracts are held up and sometimes abandoned because of the frequent inflation of labor costs in the manufacture of materials and the work of construction.

To cite one example: a few years ago the proposed new City Hall for Toronto was estimated to cost $18,000,000. The city council has been hesitating about proceeding with the job. In urging immediate construction, the mayor pointed out that the original estimate of the cost was already superseded, and that further delay would add millions of dollars to the cost of construction.

That is just one example of what is happening to many prospective enterprises, not only in building, but in business generally. Some call it "expanding economy." But the expansion is only in figures, while real values have contracted.

The Packsack

OF GREGORY CLARK

IN the year 1818 my forebears of my name took 16 weeks in a sailing ship to reach Quebec from Scotland. It being the edge of winter when they arrived, it took them two months to find and earn the means of reaching Montreal. Then it took them three months, in slow stages, working a couple of weeks here, and a week there, to make their way by bateau and bogged-down frontier road to reach the village of York, where, for better or worse, they sat down and stayed a generation.

That was my grandfather's father who made the journey. Not so far back, really. I knew my grandfather well, and his hand which I often clasped had clasped the hand of that previous man.

Last week, on a moonlight night, I flew in a Viscount in two hours and 45 minutes from Quebec City to the city that once was York. In soft comfort I reclined and watched out the window as mile by mile the route that my forebears had so laboriously taken floated moonlit and tranquilly past.

But strangely enough it was not of them I kept thinking. I have grandsons now. And I kept thinking of the sons of my grandsons and how they would some day look back at me and think how primitively I had labored through the air, taking two and three-quarter hours to go only 500 miles.

Atrocious Color

Does the Motor Vehicle Branch not have enough decency to put out a licence plate a little more sober and conservative than that conglomeration of pink and purple? Unless one has a pink car the new licence plate looks absolutely horrible.

Between us we have driven over a total of 260 years in North America and Europe, and never before have any of us seen such an eyesore in the line of motor licence plates.

Up until 1961 the vehicle branch has put out very handsome plates; why the sudden change to such an atrocious color?

No Respect for Age

On Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 10, at 3.45 p.m. I boarded a Beacon Hill bus at Douglas and Yates Street, which was practically full of young people. Pushing my way past four teenagers who stood in the aisle, I made for an empty seat near the back of the bus. As I approached the seat the bus started from the curb, throwing me off balance and I fell in the aisle.

Immediately a shout of laughter went up from the teenagers all around. As I am over 70 years of age I found it very difficult to get up. No one offered to help me up; in fact I had to ask for help. Then two girls and a small boy helped me to my feet.

These young people left the bus at Michigan, Simcoe and Niagara Streets, and the bus driver told me that the same young people use the bus at this time every day.

Is this the kind of treatment that elderly people are to receive? Can these young people not be made to realize that they will some day be elderly?

Of what good is education if respect for age and regard for other is eliminated?

British Railways

As one who has some knowledge of the progressive efficiency under nationalization of British railways, may I be permitted to reply to Mr. R. C. Williams' letter.

During the last 10 years the general public has endured some discomfort due to what has been a transition period from steam to new forms of power, electric and diesel. Gradually the old steam engines and trains have been withdrawn, the old tracks torn up and replaced with new, this modernization designed solely for the public benefit to provide more reliable transportation with increased regular interval services both for work journeys and pleasure trips.

Today it is possible to journey from London to Brighton in a comfortable, non-stop, all-Pullman electric train with waiter service, a distance of 60 miles in 50 minutes. The fare for this 120-mile return journey is less than 14 shillings, or $2.

With reference to Mr. Williams' comments on the coal industry, I would state that once miners could never earn more than £5 (the equivalent of $14) weekly, whereas today with piece work they are enabled to earn up to a maximum of $64 per week.

Above Politics

Crop failures have occurred over large areas of China, due to disastrous weather conditions, so that the nation faces a most serious famine. In the United Kingdom a movement is on foot to try and assist such distress.

Surely Canada should offer to give generous help, especially as we have such large surplus food stocks.

If our next door neighbors were starving, no enquiries would be made as to their politics or religion, but assistance would be given on humanitarian grounds, and the same should apply on the national level.

Thus it is hoped that a campaign can be got underway to urge the federal government to offer assistance.

Leasehold System

Councillor Murphy was correct when he stated that no one owns the land, only the title. Under English law a man is not a "landowner" but a "landholder." The illusion of private ownership of land persists because title to land can be purchased from a private holder.

This illusion may be dispelled if the resolution passed by the Union of B.C. Municipalities at their last convention is adopted. It is proposed that legislation be enacted to permit municipalities to lease publicly-owned lands for a period of 99 years. At present the term of lease can not exceed 20 years.

The leasehold system has worked out successfully in Canberra, the capital of Australia, and in other places. In B.C. this leasehold system may be more complicated because of the consolidated school districts and the Assessment Equalization Act, but its benefits would more than offset any disadvantages.

Canada and Cuba

According to some commentators there isn't any need for Canada to support the American policy on Cuba since none of the other NATO powers have seen fit to do so. The soundness of this position seems far from certain.

It is difficult to see how one can equate the Canadian interest in this particular crisis to that of other NATO states. It can hardly be, in view of the compelling geographical factor, that the interests of Norway or Turkey, for example, approximate that of Canada. The NORAD arrangement certainly shows that we do have a very special and vital interest in the security of our great neighbor over and above the NATO understanding.

Tossing the ball to the Europeans is a very poor substitute for policy. Indeed, in this instance our allies in Europe are quite likely to be looking to us for leadership. Thus, the practical question for us is how in fact to form a Canadian policy to fit the realities of the Canadian position.

Fishermen to Protest Trolling Limit Off Sooke

Commercial fish trollers will hold a protest meeting tonight in Sooke Community Hall to dispute the limiting of trolling off Sooke Harbor.

The International Pacific Salmon Fishing Commission has limited trolling to 18 days between June 24 and Sept. 24. A petition with some 90 names appended has been sent to the commission's New Westminster office.

Sooke fishermen claim the brief open season is unfair. They say fish caught in by waters off Sooke are more valuable than those caught in other areas.

Frank Gray of Sooke, a former superintendent of the Sooke fish weir, will be chairman for the meeting, which starts at 8 p.m.

DEAN RUSK
... stakes are high

Red Power Grows

Lengthy Struggle Predicted by Rusk

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Communism is more powerful than ever before and the free world faces a "long-time struggle" against it, Secretary of State-designate Dean Rusk said yesterday.

He also said he sees "no prospect at the present time" of establishing diplomatic relations with Red China, since this would require abandonment of the Nationalist government on Formosa.

Rusk gave his views on international affairs to the Senate foreign relations committee, which must pass on his appointment to the top post in President-elect John Kennedy's cabinet.

He said that "the power and dynamism of Communism is larger today" than it ever has been. In the East-West struggle, "the stakes are very high and the country will have to do what must be done," he added.

Rusk said that some day the Communist threat will come to an end and "our burden will be less." But he added that it would be wrong to expect such a development now.

Asked about Red China, Rusk said that while the United States cannot recognize that government at this time, it should acknowledge "the presence on the mainland of a large and potent force as a fact of modern life which we cannot ignore."

He said the question of Communist China also raises a difficult parliamentary problem in the United Nations, one which "can't be handled or decided by the United States alone."

"It will have to be continually studied, in light of its bearing on the disarmament problem," he said. "It is difficult to envisage any real progress in disarmament without participation by the potent force of mainland China."

Overseas Teaching Job Open to District Staff
A two-year teaching assignment in department of national defence schools in Europe will be thrown open to applications by Greater Victoria teachers in the next few weeks.

It follows the decision this week by the education committee of Greater Victoria school board to carry on the practice which began here in 1956.

Trustee R. W. Freethy, committee chairman, said yesterday a replacement is being sought for Douglas Smith, a Victoria High School teacher now serving as principal of a small elementary-secondary school for children of armed forces personnel at Ramstein, West Germany.

Teachers for the overseas jobs are selected on the basis of competence and seniority. A board spokesman said "we try to get a good representative of our local school system."

Last year, there were 15 applicants for two vacancies in DND schools.

Ramsay Replaces Haddock

Arena Critic Wins Post on Board

Report Shows Declining Revenue

Without open discussion, city council yesterday filled the gaps left in the arena commission by the controversy over arena management.

Council voted unanimously to appoint former alderman Hugh Ramsay to replace Courtney Haddock, and Forrest L. Shaw to replace Frank G. Mulliner.

Mr. Haddock resigned in protest against the arena commission's treatment of six former employees.

DEMANDED FACTS
Mr. Ramsay, who will take his place for the 18 remaining months of his term, led among aldermen in criticizing the commission and demanding that the facts be brought to light.

Mr. Mulliner, chairman of the commission until his resignation, quit on doctor's orders. Mayor Percy Scurrell said Mr. Shaw, replacing him for the remaining six months of his term, has been the commission's legal adviser, able to participate in discussion but not to vote.

BEST SETUP
Acting chairman of the commission, W. F. Pinfold, said last night the commission had received a report from an accountant instituting a new system at the arena and "it's the best setup we have had in the history of the arena. Things are as smooth there now as they ever have been."

New manager John Morgan is expected to arrive from Nelson about Jan. 25, he said.

Semi-annual report of the arena, submitted to council yesterday indicated that operating profit this year will fall far short of last year's exceptional level, second best in arena history.

Sooke Board Re-Elects Weir
R. J. Weir was re-elected chairman of Sooke school board at the recent annual meeting.

D. R. Roberts was re-elected vice-chairman.

Committee chairmen include Mrs. Violet Davidson, finance; Mr. Roberts, management; J. S. Williams, buildings and grounds; and Mrs. Davidson, health.

Forty-Five Sign

Clean Ditch, Lower Lake Langford Residents' Plea

Langford Lake residents yesterday circulated a petition calling for the provincial government to clean a clogged drainage ditch and relieve a steadily rising lake level.

Forty-five persons have signed the petition so far, said Ron Woolcock, 1261 Goldstream.

The petition asks the government to "take measures that will lower the water level of the lake as has been done heretofore . . . this rise due to blockage of outlet affects low-lying properties and septic tank drainage of those living at the lake side."

A highways department employee said the department cleaned out the ditch in 1950 and again a number of years earlier when the highway was being constructed.

EVERY 100 FEET Another official said the existing drainage drop is about 1 1/2 inches every 100 feet and that for effective drainage there should be a minimum grade of six inches for every 100 feet, which would cause a cut 10 feet deep near the outlet.

Issue Skirted

Racing at Fair Finds City foe

City council yesterday agreed to meet directors of the B.C. Agricultural Association to discuss financial support for a fair—but with a clear warning from one alderman that he won't support horse-racing.

Gambling at horse-racing, said Ald. Rev. J. L. W. McLean, "is an economic disadvantage to the community," and he called on council to think of small wage-earners losing their money and merchants being unable to collect their bills.

NO COMMITMENTS

Council agreed to meet the directors, however, without committing itself in advance. The century-old association, which has a 50-year lease of 130 acres at Colwood, informed council it hopes to re-establish a fair this year, and believes it would be providing a much-needed service to the community.

AREA NEEDED

President of the association, Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow, said attendance at events at the fairground site "show that an area of this size is needed," and stressed the importance of tourism to Victoria.

"We would have something going on there every day of the tourist season," he said.

Germans Jailed, Loot Recovered

CHEMUNUS—An intensive RCMP investigation here ended yesterday with jail sentences for three German sailors and the location of loot valued at over $2,200.

Arrested after their ship, the German freighter Klaus Schokke, was due to sail were Manfred Kuchler, 20, and Heinz Sasloff, 24, after a lightning raid on the vessel. The ship was held here pending police investigation.

The two seamen pleaded guilty to breaking, entering and theft yesterday and were each sentenced to a year in jail. Klaus Jürgen Kirsten, 20, was fined $150 and sentenced to two days in jail for car theft.

ENTERED AND LOOTED

A police dragnet went out shortly after 1:45 a.m. Wednesday when Kays Hardware on Willow Street was entered and looted.

In the vicinity of the store Kirsten was arrested driving a stolen car. The two others were with him.

He later admitted stealing two cars and was sentenced to two days in jail and fined $75 on each charge.

Police said the fine had not been paid up to the time the ship left for Vancouver. If it is not paid Kirsten will have to serve six months in jail.

Police spent several hours searching the ship at the MacMillan, Blood and Powell River Co. dock where it was taking on lumber, but nothing was found and police left.

Later in the afternoon police swooped down again and found articles from the store in various parts of the ship and in crew members' lockers and baggage.

TAKEN ASHORE

About 5 a.m. the two sailors were arrested and taken ashore.

Police said that merchandise valued at $178 was taken along with a locked portable cabinet containing papers valued at $2,000. All of it was recovered except the cabinet and contents which had been dropped over the ship's side. The cabinet was valued at $50.

Divers will attempt to recover the cabinet and papers later today.

Etcheverry Signs With NFL Cards

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Sam Etcheverry, ace quarterback in Canadian pro football, has signed a two-year contract with St. Louis Cardinals, it was learned here Thursday night.

Etcheverry's signature on the contract ended almost a week of negotiations between himself and Walter Wolfner, Cardinals' managing director, and legal consultations involving Pete Rozelle and Syd Halter, heads of the National Football League and Canadian Football League respectively, and Marshall Leahy, NFL lawyer.

The signing took place in Miami. Wolfner confirmed it in a telephone conversation with Joe Pollack, Globe-Democrat football writer.

Wolfner said: "I am happy to announce that the Cards have signed Sam Etcheverry."

$20,000 PER
Terms were not disclosed, but it was reported that Etcheverry, a sure-fire passer, would get in excess of $20,000 a year.

Cardinals hope "The Rifle" will end their nagging quarterback miseries of many years.

Etcheverry, 30, lives in Montreal with his wife and four children. He had been a standout for Montreal Alouettes for nine seasons. He stands five feet, 11 inches and weighs 185 pounds and has played in more than 150 consecutive games, completing more than 2,000 passes for 29,000 yards.

Cardinals coach Pop Ivy, whose Edmonton team defeated Montreal in the Grey Cup in 1954, 1955 and 1956, calls Etcheverry "as fine a passer as I've ever seen."

Signing 'Means Nothing' In Syd Halter's Opinion

WINNIPEG (CP)—G. Sydney Halter, commissioner of the Canadian Football League, said in an interview early today that quarterback Sam Etcheverry's signing with the St. Louis Cardinals "means nothing."

"Whether or not he (Etcheverry) can sign is a matter presently under discussion between the commissioner of the National Football League and myself."

The signing, completed in Miami and announced Thursday night in St. Louis, unofficially gave the former Montreal Alouettes ace passer a two-year contract, but Halter said the agreement might have been signed "some time ago."

"It has to be accepted by the commissioner of the National Football League (Pete Rozelle) before becoming official," the Canadian commissioner said.

"I don't think Etcheverry is a free agent, that he can properly sign with a U.S. club," Halter said he was discussing the case with Rozelle by long-distance telephone. He could not predict when a decision could be reached.

"We've got a legal, legitimate contract with Etcheverry that says he can't negotiate without our permission."

If Cardinals get Etcheverry, Workman said, it will mean the end of an unwritten agreement between the Canadian and National Football Leagues that they would not step into each other's territory to grab players.

"If Etcheverry is signed by Cardinals it means we can go after players in the NFL that we'd like to have," Workman maintained.

ROCKED CANADA
At the end of last season, Workman's Big Four club traded Etcheverry to Hamilton Tiger-Cats in return for quarterback Bernie Faloney in a deal that rocked the Canadian football world.

The deal also sent two-way end Hal Patterson to Hamilton for Canadian lineman Don Paquette. Patterson already has signed with the Ticats.

Workman said Thursday night the linemen's deal stands but that unless Etcheverry goes to Hamilton, the Faloney deal is off.

SAM'S OKAY NEEDED
"The trade was made under the condition that it would not take place without Sam's permission," he said. "That was a recognized clause in the contract and the basis under which the trade was made."

We knew of this problem when we made the trade."

Etcheverry has said, however, he feels that because of the no-trade agreement, his Montreal contract was voided by the Hamilton deal, leaving him a free agent.

There were only two entries in the junior mixed pairs, both from Penitence. Vernon Hartt and Bonnie Buco of Penitence were first, with Bruce Barritt and Dale Hutchison second.

There are four events scheduled for today.

Etcheverry was reported to have had a "no trade" contract with the Alouettes but was traded to Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Big Four after the end of last season.

He and Wolfner met in Miami last weekend and agreed to terms, contingent on whether or not the trade had abrogated his Canadian contract, the Globe-Democrat said. Halter declined to say whether the Canadian league would contest the matter in court. He said the contract filed in his office did not have a "no trade" clause but added: "I understand there was an additional agreement."

one that had held him to three goals in eight previous meetings. They switched Dickie Moore from his normal right wing spot to left wing to check rightwinger Mahovich, and Moore held him to three (3) shots, none of them dangerous.

Meanwhile Moore and Geoffrion were scoring their 27th goal each, and Bill Hicke got his 12th and 13th as Canadians broke open a tight game with four goals in the second period.

Jean-Guy Talbot and Guy Gendron scored the other goals for Montreal, which has beaten Toronto six times in nine games. Dick Duff and Billy Harris were the Toronto marksmen.

Defenceman Carl Brewer, back in action for Toronto, injured his ankle in the second period and did not play again. Also back for Leafs were forwards Ron Stewart and Bob Nevin, all bothered with injuries lately. Harvey is still out with a shoulder separation. Talbot and Bob Turner played with wrist injuries, and Henri Richard and Claude Provost were bothered by bad ankles.

New York Rangers, facing a threat of a drastic reshuffling if better things aren't forthcoming, opened a six-game road trip last night by playing to a 4-4 tie with Boston Bruins in the only other game scheduled.

Rangers appeared to have things sewed up on a pair of second period power goals by Andy Bathgate and Brian Clukey, which gave them a 4-3 edge. Clukey had two goals and Andy Heberton scored the other for Rangers, who have lost only one of eight to Boston this season.

Milt Schmidt's decision to go with his rookies for the Bruins paid off as they snapped a three-game losing streak. Rookie Gerry Ouellette scored

Leafs Nix James Deal Lawsuit Still Rankles

By JIM TAYLOR

Toronto Maple Leafs have kicked Winnipeg Warriors squarely in the teeth, but it's the Victoria Cougars who are feeling the pain.

For 12 delicious hours, coach George Agar was enjoying the possibility of having Eddie Dorohoy in the lineup within the next three weeks. In exchange for rights to deal with Dorohoy, all he had to give up was negotiation rights to Gerry James, who apparently doesn't want to come here anyway.

Winnipeg wanted James, and James wanted Winnipeg.

Cougars wanted Dorohoy, and the Pistol was only too happy to stay in Victoria. All was sweetness and light, until word came from on high in Toronto.

James is not going to play with Winnipeg, a Toronto director said emphatically. He should know, since Maple Leafs own James' contract and gave Victoria permission to negotiate with him in the first place.

There has never been love lost between Toronto and Winnipeg since the time two years ago when Warriors owner Jack Perrin brought and won a lawsuit against Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens claiming they didn't give him enough players. This is undoubtedly a dig back at Perrin.

It's also a dirty dig at the Cougars, who are right back on the same old merry-go-round dealing with the elusive Mr. James.

ALWAYS SAME
"We've been trying to pin James down for a month," Agar said last night. "Every time we get to him he says he'll know in a week. Always it's another week."

James, a rightwinger with NHL experience, would provide the Cougars with a little of the sock they need so badly. But James is promoting a business venture in Winnipeg, would stay there if it's successful, and won't even say if he'll come out here with Cougars if it isn't.

"I'll be making a few calls to see what's going on," Agar said. In the meantime, he has other things to worry about. Namely, Seattle Totems.

Totems take on Cougars at Memorial Arena tonight at 8:30. Cougars have produced only four goals in their last four games, and their checking against Spokane Tuesday can be described as terrible at best, but Agar is confident they'll be back to their old aggressive hockey tonight.

They will need to be. Three points behind the fifth-place Totems, they are beginning to hear rumblings behind them as Winnipeg Warriors begin a drive to get out of the cellar. Both Warriors and Edmonton Flyers are four points behind Victoria, in last place.

Agar plans no change from Tuesday's lineup.

Ordinarily, the team representing the Western Conference of the National Football League rates about a seven-point edge over the Eastern Conference representative. The West has responded by winning six of the first 10 bowls.

The game this year features two fine quarterbacks—Johnny Unitas of Baltimore Colts for the West and Norm Van Brocklin of Philadelphia Eagles for the East.

West team is a one-point favorite over the East for Sunday's Pro Bowl football game here. It's the shortest spread in years for the West.

Winnipeg wanted James, and James wanted Winnipeg.

Cougars wanted Dorohoy, and the Pistol was only too happy to stay in Victoria. All was sweetness and light, until word came from on high in Toronto.

James is not going to play with Winnipeg, a Toronto director said emphatically. He should know, since Maple Leafs own James' contract and gave Victoria permission to negotiate with him in the first place.

There has never been love lost between Toronto and Winnipeg since the time two years ago when Warriors owner Jack Perrin brought and won a lawsuit against Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens claiming they didn't give him enough players. This is undoubtedly a dig back at Perrin.

It's also a dirty dig at the Cougars, who are right back on the same old merry-go-round dealing with the elusive Mr. James.

ALWAYS SAME
"We've been trying to pin James down for a month," Agar said last night. "Every time we get to him he says he'll know in a week. Always it's another week."

James, a rightwinger with NHL experience, would provide the Cougars with a little of the sock they need so badly. But James is promoting a business venture in Winnipeg, would stay there if it's successful, and won't even say if he'll come out here with Cougars if it isn't.

"I'll be making a few calls to see what's going on," Agar said. In the meantime, he has other things to worry about. Namely, Seattle Totems.

Totems take on Cougars at Memorial Arena tonight at 8:30. Cougars have produced only four goals in their last four games, and their checking against Spokane Tuesday can be described as terrible at best, but Agar is confident they'll be back to their old aggressive hockey tonight.

They will need to be. Three points behind the fifth-place Totems, they are beginning to hear rumblings behind them as Winnipeg Warriors begin a drive to get out of the cellar. Both Warriors and Edmonton Flyers are four points behind Victoria, in last place.

Spy Sentenced

5,000 Photos Sold to Reds

KARLSRUHE, West Germany (Reuters)—A confessed spy who said the Russians wanted him to use his wife to seduce a British officer to get military secrets was sentenced Thursday to three years in prison by a West German court.

Juergen Asbar, 31, a radio mechanic who admitted espionage, was found guilty of treason.

Asbar's wife Gertrud, 27, received a six-month suspended sentence. Hans Pfau, 38, a carpenter who passed Asbar part of a British tank through a washroom window at a repair depot, was sentenced to two years.

Gunther Schultheiss, 37, a salesman, and Dieter Moll, 31, an electrical mechanic, both got one-year terms for aiding Asbar.

Asbar was charged with passing more than 5,000 photographs of British military doc-

Reds Charge 200 Ships 'Buzzed' by U.S., Canada

MOSCOW (UPI)—Viktor Bakayev, Soviet minister of merchant marine, said yesterday U.S. and Canadian planes have buzzed more than 200 Soviet ships at "mast-top height" during the last five months in a systematic program of provocation.

He showed a news con-

The Moscow newspaper Trud joined Bakayev's allegations with a picture allegedly showing a U.S. Air Force plane dropping smoke charges near a Soviet steamer.

Bakayev said American aviation "is acting in a most provocative and impermissible manner against Soviet vessels." He blamed the buzzings on the Eisenhower administration but expressed hope that "with the coming into office of the new American government the situation will change."

MONTREAL (CP)—Russia's charges that a Canadian Lancaster bomber makes flights to photograph a Soviet polar station were termed "old, old hat" yesterday by an RCAF spokesman.

"We do this and we've said we do this," said the RCAF spokesman.

City Council Briefs

First 'Army,' Then a Flood?

Aldermen See 'Yes' as Big Commitment

Salvation Army request for financial aid in building its $900,000 Matson Sunset Lodge for the aged raised a few furrows on aldermanic brows yesterday.

But city council referred it—and a request for financial support for the Maritime Museum of B.C.—to Greater Victoria Inter-municipal committee for consideration.

The Salvation Army, which will try to raise $245,000 locally for the lodge, asked council to consider making a grant at budget-time.

ARE WE COMMITTED?

Ald. Rev. J. L. W. McLean said he was sympathetic, but "if we say yes, are we committed to say yes to any similar group that comes along? How much money have we to give to such worthy causes?"

Ald. Arthur Dowell agreed, noting that other groups were providing similar accommodation.

Ald. McLean added that he was concerned about organizations appealing to the citizens, then to council, then seeking two contributions from the same citizens.

"I just don't feel too happy about that," he said.

Other council action yesterday:

• A letter from sculptor Peggy Walton Packard, suggesting that repair of the deteriorated statue of the Queen would be an invitation to "further disrespectful and unseemly treatment of it," but suggesting that it might be cast in bronze, was referred to parks committee.

• Health committee chairman Ald. Mrs. Lily Wilson said she was disappointed that "it was from this council that the news broke" that consideration was being given to a metropolitan health setup. But Mayor Percy Scourrah said he couldn't go along "with any secrecy regarding something on tap for two years that everyone knows about." (Council went into committee.)

tee, in closed session, after its previous meeting to discuss the proposed metropolitan health service. Yesterday it reported to itself, as council, that it had considered a draft agreement for integration, approved it in principle, and was willing to enter into it subject to it being reviewed and approved by the city solicitor.)

• A letter from the Victoria Labor Council calling for consideration of a better method of counting civic election ballots was received and filed, but Mayor Scourrah commended the suggestion of VLC secretary-treasurer Ald. A. W. Toone that each caller-counter team be more widely separated from the next.

• Council asked the provincial fish and game branch to extend its game reserve to a strip along the northern edge of Thetis Lake Park not now covered.

• A petition to the legislature for private-act amendments was approved. The amendments would enable the city to regulate signs without question of paying compensation, and to charge penalties on overdue local improvement tax bills.

PEGGY WALTON PACKARD

... invitation to vandals

• Council approved making a two-year contract with T. P. O'Grady to provide full-time services of city solicitor for $22,500 a year, and advertising for a city-prosecutor.

• Conservation Council's proposal that Thetis, Elk and Beaver Lakes properties should be dedicated as parks was rejected because, public works committee said, dedication would result in their loss as assets in event of amalgamation negotiations and the city would have to pay taxes on them.

Mayor Scourrah said, however, that public opinion would never allow the properties to be alienated from public use.

• Gordon H. Carter was unanimously appointed a city police commissioner for the next two years, without discussion.

• Council rejected a Chamber of Commerce proposal

Show Business

By Dick Williams

One of the worst spots any TV commercial pitehman can get into caught up with Robert Q. Lewis on an embarrassing occasion. Many recall the incident, but Barney Glazier is one of the few who remembers how the sharp-talking Lewis got out of it.

Lewis had just said, "I like this cigarette better than any other brand," when he was suddenly convulsed by a spasm of coughing. What would you have done?

Lewis covered up quickly by flipping, "You see, the mention of another brand makes me cough!"

Two Major Events Tonight in Sidney

Two major events highlighting the Sidney district winter season will take place at 8 p.m. tonight.

Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes will officially open the new Saanich Peninsula Branch No. 37, Canadian Legion Hall, and the Victoria

Symphony will present a concert at Sanscha Hall.

At the Legion opening, timed so guests will be able to attend at least half of the concert, addresses will be made by H. L. Priake, Victoria and District Zone commander; and Lieutenant-Governor Pearkes, who will cut the opening ribbon.

Guild Tryouts Saturday For 'Picnic' Production

Tryouts for the next Theatre Guild major production, William Inge's "Picnic," will be held Saturday at 3 p.m. and Sunday at 7:45 p.m.

Director Margaret Hall has seven female and four male parts to fill.

Both tryouts are at the Langham Court Theatre where "Picnic" is due for production March 17.

Studio Group Meets Today

Christine McNab will address a meeting of the Theatre Guild Studio Group at 7:30 p.m. today at Langham Court Theatre.

Miss McNab is past chairman of the Southern Vancouver Island Drama Festival Committee and has also been closely associated for many years with the Greater Victoria Schools Drama Festival.

Planned to be the largest shopping centre development on Vancouver Island, and rivaling mainland centres in size, construction is well under way on

Courthouse Project Forges Ahead

Helping the unemployment situation in the city is construction of the new courthouse, a block wide and half a block long, bounded by Burdett, Blanshard and Courtenay. Mild, unwintry weather enjoyed by Victoria in recent months has helped speed the work.—(Robin Clarke photo.)

Oak Bay Recreation Centre May Be Voted On in '61

Oak Bay council hopes to hold a vote this December on a new municipal recreation centre.

Coun. Gordon Elworthy, chairman of council's parks committee, said planning is already under way for the centre which will probably be located in Fireman's Park.

A survey of all recreation groups in the community is nearing completion. It's aim is to determine the most vital specific needs for a recreation centre.

"Everyone is agreed that there is a crying need for the recreational centre to serve Oak Bay," said Coun. Elworthy. "All we have to do is find out what is needed most."

SWIMMING POOL
The committee is already studying proposals for incorporating a swimming pool, a skating rink, a gymnasium, auditorium with stage, various meeting rooms, and a library with reading rooms.

Any or all of these proposals may go into the final plans for a recreational centre, Coun. Elworthy said. He added Fireman's Park appeared to be "the only available" site; and council was agreed "anything that we propose will have to be a self-liquidating project."

RCAP WITNESSES
RCAP witnesses testified that MacGregor had taken his marital problems to his friends and to superior officers at Comox and had been ordered by the station commander to avoid Simms.

AVOID SIMMS
RCAP witnesses testified that MacGregor had taken his marital problems to his friends and to superior officers at Comox and had been ordered by the station commander to avoid Simms.

Others said MacGregor had muttered something about "killing somebody" and had talked of suicide.

A physician said he had attended Mrs. MacGregor at her home in December and had found her with bruises on the face, arms and thighs and said he understood from the conversation which took place at the time that the injuries had been inflicted by her husband.

FINAL PROPOSAL
Coun. Elworthy added: "We hope by the end of this year to have a final proposal to put before the people of Oak Bay, but this will not be done before financing and plans for the centre are completed."

Hot Puck Shot To Arena Body
City council yesterday passed a hot puck to the arena commission.

Mayor Percy Scurrell said he had been asked if council would give a luncheon for Maurice (Rocky) Richard when he visits Victoria Jan. 31, with about 30 guests.

"Who are the proposed guests?" asked Ald. Michael Griffin.

"I've no idea," said the mayor. "People connected with hockey."

"Why not refer it to the arena commission," said Ald. M. H. Mooney. "It's hockey—hockey—hockey." They have the funds for that."

Council quickly agreed.

Welfare Agencies

'Understaffed Overworked'

Local welfare agency heads freely admitted yesterday they were understaffed and overworked.

"Our workers have case loads of 200 or more when they should only be handling 50 or 60," said city welfare administrator William Hooson. "We've had one person added to our staff since 1950 yet there has been a huge increase in the work load."

BETTER-TRAINED
"I believe we have a better-trained staff proportionately than the provincial government but our case loads are still high and our social workers are forced to work many hours overtime," said David Woodworth, director of the Family and Children's Service.

The two welfare administrators were commenting on charges by a city widow that her daughter had been molested but that the police were not informed until four days later. It was alleged that a social worker did not believe the girl's story.

UNDER AGE OF 14
Mr. Woodworth said last year there were between 25 and 30 girls under the age of 14 who had given birth to illegitimate children.

"We know that many more girls in this bracket had relations with men," said Mr. Woodworth. "Legally, all these instances constitute technical rape. Yet very few of these cases are picked up."

UNABLE TO COPE
He said social workers were aware of the large number of sexual incidents occurring but to a large extent they were unable to cope with the problem.

Mr. Woodworth said there was a lack of supervision on the part of the provincial government, although not so much in regard to day to day details, and the government should have adequate staff in the child welfare branch in order to maintain planning for extended and improved services which would benefit such agencies.

LACK OF GUIDANCE
"We are handicapped by the lack of guidance and assistance from the government," he said.

Mr. Hooson said that the shortage of staff and money made it impossible for the city welfare department to attempt to rehabilitate people and prevent their continued dependency on assistance.

SAME EMPHASIS
"This is where the provincial government should be providing leadership," he said. "I don't say they don't wish to do it but they're certainly not giving the same emphasis to the problem that was given a few years ago."

NOT POSSIBLE
"In view of the nature of the case, as well as through the fact that the matter is now before the Court, it is not possible to make public the details of the circumstances guiding the Society's actions."

"However, it must be repeated that social workers are perhaps more aware than anyone else of the tragically large number of children and young women who suffer from injuries of this kind, and of the disastrous effects upon them of such experiences, particularly when their lives are thus made public."

Three persons suffered minor injuries late last night when their car struck a light pole at Dallas and Pilot.

Police said driver of the car, Raymond Watson, 19, 1918 Fernwood, was treated for bruises and facial cuts along with passengers, Susan Bouch, 17, 1145 Grant, knee cuts; and Kenneth Best, 20, 646 Bay, facial cuts.

All were treated at St. Joseph's Hospital.

One senior official tells of a bear in Manning Park who had a penchant for canned apple juice. He says the bear not only knew his apples but was also fully conversant with the scientific way of drinking the Okanagan product straight from the can.

This bear used to hang around the forest campsite and one morning the crew decided to see if they could confuse the animal. They put out one can of apple juice and a can of orange, tomato and grapefruit juice.

Eventually the bear shuffled, grabbed the apple juice from among the tin, bit a hole in each side of the top and quaffed the lot before ambulating off down the path.

One-Hour Limit

10-Cent Parking Gets Council Nod

To encourage provision of off-street parking, city council yesterday approved doubling the parking-meter rate where it is now five cents an hour with a one-hour limit.

The new rate, however, will not go into effect until new meters are obtained—three or four months, public works chairman Ald. Geoffrey Edgell said.

TAKE TIME
Because of this delay, council decided to take time to give further consideration to a proposal to set aside the increase in net revenue for civic parking development.

The new plan calls for retention of the half-hour limit on Broad, at five cents a half-hour; a rate of five cents a half-hour elsewhere in the one-hour parking metered areas, and on the Cormorant Street parking lot, where the limit is three hours, and retention of the present rate of five cents an hour at meters where the parking limit is two hours.

MISGIVINGS
Ald. A. W. Toome alone expressed some misgivings. He asked if public works committee had fully considered the possibility that higher meter rates might dissuade people from shopping downtown.

"If we expect private enterprise to provide off-street parking, they can't spend that type of money as long as it's five cents an hour to park on the streets," replied Ald. Edgell, adding that Victoria was the only city of its size in Canada or the Pacific Northwest still charging only five cents an hour.

"In downtown Toronto it's 10 cents a half-hour," said Mayor Percy Scurrell.

MAYOR AGREES
Ald. Arthur Dowell suggested that at this time the amount of parking-meter money taken into general revenue should be pegged at $140,000 a year, and the excess earmarked for parking. The mayor agreed, but suggested the excess of net parking revenue over the equivalent of one mill of taxation be set aside. (One mill produces about $100,000 at present.)

The suggestions were referred to works committee because, Ald. Edgell said, "we have lots of time, and there are conflicting thoughts."

THREE HURT WHEN CAR HITS POLE
Three persons suffered minor injuries late last night when their car struck a light pole at Dallas and Pilot.

Police said driver of the car, Raymond Watson, 19, 1918 Fernwood, was treated for bruises and facial cuts along with passengers, Susan Bouch, 17, 1145 Grant, knee cuts; and Kenneth Best, 20, 646 Bay, facial cuts.

Seymour Park (no kin of B.C. beauty spot) of the provincial recreational department says an American tourist was camping with his wife in the park last summer and decided one bright morning to try to lure a bear into the tent where his wife lay sleeping. The purpose of the experiment was to get a dandy snapshot to show the folks back home.

Now American ingenuity knows no bounds and the tourist, with the aid of a considerable number of sugar cubes, managed to get the bear into the tent with his sleeping wife.

The tourist pointed the camera and voom!—off went the flash.

With one bound the bear rushed from the tent, trampling the camera-happy tourist underfoot in the process.

Our tourist friend was so mad he spent the remainder of the day looking for the park ranger to lodge a complaint.

He said the bear was murderously dangerous and must be shot for the protection of campers. Thankfully the ranger took a different view of the incident.

ABOUT FACE: A navel acquaintance of ours suggested that some city merchants will have an unique opportunity to practice what they preach during the visit here later this month of the San Diego-based destroyer USS de Haven. He feels sure they will erect signs reading: "American sailors. Don't buy anything from us. Support your San Diego merchants."

Bowker 'Dangerous'

Housewife Leads Fight Over Creek

Alarmed by the dangerous condition of Bowker Creek, a Victoria mother has circulated a petition calling on the city to cover it over.

"I started a couple of days ago, and I have more than 300 names now," Mrs. Florence Rogers, 3044 Doncaster, said last night.

"Everyone's been complaining about it and nobody has been doing anything about it, so I just went out on my own."

NO GOOD TALKING
"It's no good sitting at home, talking about it."

Mrs. Rogers' home is immediately opposite the creek. The family's basement was one of many flooded in December, 1956, when the creek overflowed its banks.

"The creek is nine feet deep and it's such a hazard to children in this district," she said. "The fence along the sides of the creek is knocked down in a lot of places and the railings on one side of the Burton Avenue bridge have been missing since quite a while before Christmas."

SEWAGE ODOR
"In the summer the creek goes very low and there is an odor from sewage from Saanich, and rats and flies."

"The city hasn't done anything about it since the last flooding. They promised something would be done, but nothing has been done."

Little historical research with the assistance of provincial archivist William Ireland. The 14 statues, which include one of Captain Vancouver, are the work of Italian-born sculptor Charles Marega who died in 1939.

Your Problems

By Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I was married just three months when my husband was shipped overseas. He will be coming home next month and I'm going to San Diego to meet him. We've been separated eight months and I'm so excited I could just faint.

Yesterday Mom announced that she'd like to go with me. She says she has heard such wonderful things about San Diego and she'd love to see the white sand and the seagulls. I don't want her on this trip. What can I do?—MAD.

Dear Mad: Tell her in plain language this is going to be a second honeymoon, not a bird-watching expedition, and to please stay home.

Dear Ann Landers: If I'm wrong tell me. I'm a mother who feels children should not be allowed complete run of the kitchen. My sister's children go into her refrigerator whenever they feel like it. Any hour of the day or evening they can be found eating in any room of the house. I have a neighbor whose kids eat all day long. They come over here eating cookies or jam sandwiches, and they even walk around gnawing on chicken legs.

My children are poor eaters. If I let them snack between meals they wouldn't have any appetites. My husband says I'm wrong to order them to keep out of the refrigerator. Am I?—AGGRAVATED.

Dear Aggravated: Kids should not be permitted to eat anything they want at any hour of the day or night. Snacks, however, are nourishing and you ought to prepare special things for the children—particularly when they come home from school. Give them a choice and let them help themselves.

I dislike the idea of ordering kids to stay out of the kitchen. Perhaps one reason your

WHAT'S COOKING

By LOUISE MOORE

All the happy gourmets are right ready to dish up oysters during "R" months and they're so right, for fall, winter and early spring seem to be the best months for the plump, sweetest and most delicious of shellfish.

Because of its delicate soft gelatinous pulp, oysters require intelligent cooking. The rule to remember is cook only until edges curl—about three minutes.

This sauce is especially good with raw oysters too—combine 1/4 cup tarragon vinegar, 1 tbsp shallots finely minced, 1/2 tsp freshly ground pepper, 1 tsp mustard seed. Mix and serve with oysters on the half shell.

COCKTAIL SAUCE (For Shellfish)

Combine 1/4 cup tomato ketchup, 1/4 cup chili sauce, 1 tbsp prepared horseradish, 1 tsp Worcestershire sauce, 1 tsp finely minced celery, few drops tabasco and 1/4 tsp. salt.

OYSTER STEW

Melt 1/2 cup butter, add 1 pint oysters and the liquor and cook until oysters curl around the edges. Add 1 quart rich milk, salt and pepper to taste, 1/4 tsp. or more paprika. Bring to almost boiling point. Serve at once with salted crackers. I like to crumble the crackers right into the brew and don't be stingy with the butter when making oyster stew.

EASY OYSTER PIE

Line a pie plate with crumbled salted crackers mixed with melted butter. Add a layer of big juicy oysters that have been picked over carefully to remove any bits of shell. Add a shake of onion salt, a grind of the pepper mill, dot with butter and sprinkling of cracker crumbs. Continue until you have two or three layers of oysters or enough for serving the family.

Top with salted cracker crumbs well dotted with butter. Bake in hot oven (400) 15 to 20 minutes or until top is browned and piping hot throughout.

Some like to add a bit of cream to this dish but the liquor clinging to the oysters is sufficient. Serve with asparagus salad with vinaigrette sauce, crusty rolls, a compote of fruit and plain cake for a delightful supper, or try a dinner with plump broiled tomatoes stuffed, and brussels sprouts.

Prime Ribs Come Close

VANCOUVER (CP)—Canada will never have a truly national dish because of the country's size, says Hugh Craig, president of the Canadian Restaurant Association.

Roast prime ribs of beef comes close, however, he said during a visit here from Calgary.

But while there was no national dish, there were regional specialties such as lobster and other seafoods in the Maritimes, pea soup in Quebec, Winnipeg goldeye in Manitoba, berry pie in Saskatoon, beef in Alberta and salmon in British Columbia.

And there was a trend toward specialization by Canadian restaurants as indicated by the popularity of steak houses, pancake houses and pizza palaces. One oddity was the demand for barbecued pig tails from Western Canada in Kitchener, Ont.

Snow Slows Royal Guests

ASKER, Norway (AP)—In the Christmas card setting of Asker Valley, Princess Astrid Thursday wed the divorced commoner for whom she is renouncing her position as first lady of Norway.

Inside the little, red-brick Lutheran church, Europe's princes and princesses watched as the 28-year-old Astrid became the bride of Johan Martin Ferner, 33, director of a fashionable men's clothing store.

Outside in the snow, 1,000 Norwegians cheered as the radiant princess—a blonde vision in white ermine coat and white tulle gown—emerged with the groom. He was nervous, but managed a fleeting smile.

Heavy snow made the 12 miles of highway between here and Oslo so treacherous that King Olav V and all the visiting royalty and near royalty were late getting to the church.

Some of the leading clergymen of the Lutheran church opposed Astrid's wedding to a divorced man. So the wedding was moved from Oslo to this pleasant little village in the valley.

Bishop Arne Fjellbu of Nidaros, now retired, performed the ceremony as an old friend of the family.

Among the guests was Britain's Princess Margaret. Beside her was her commoner husband, Antony Armstrong-Jones.

Among the other guests were Princess Margaretha, Denmark's heiress apparent; Prince Jean, heir to Luxembourg's throne and his wife, Princess Josephine-Charlotte; Crown Prince Harald of Norway, and Princess Ragnhild of Norway and her commoner husband, shipowner Erling Lorentzen.

Astrid, now 28, has been Norway's first lady since the death six years ago of her mother, Crown Princess Martha. Now she becomes Princess Astrid, "Mrs. Johan Ferner"—without the title of Her Royal Highness.

Princess Astrid and Johan met through mutual love of yachting. They won several regattas with her yacht Astra. Both the groom and his brother Finn won silver medals in yachting at the Helsinki Olympics in 1952.

Mr. and Mrs. Christopher P. M. Heath pictured leaving St. Paul's Garrison Church following their marriage. The bride is the former Laurel Beale, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William George Beale of Tahsis, B.C., formerly of Victoria. The groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Heath, have recently resided in Vancouver but are leaving shortly to return to England.—(Chevrone Studio.)

Great Aunt Officiates

Rev. Emma Smiley, great aunt of groom, William Lyle Garraway, performed the ceremony when he was married to Helen, daughter of Mrs. Kjellfrid Edenhelm of Vancouver and Mr. Arne Lund of Oslo, Norway in Victoria Truth Centre recently.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Arnekjell Lund, wore a cocktail-length dress of champagne satin styled with square neckline and three-quarter length sleeves. Her champagne-colored hat was trimmed in brown and she had a purple orchid at her waist. A black diamond necklace was her only jewelry.

Mrs. Patterson of Hedley, B.C. was matron of honor and wore a peach-colored satin afternoon dress and corsage of white carnations.

The groom, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Garraway, 2728 Shelbourne Street, had Mr. Ross Fitzgerald as best man.

Mr. Alfred Patterson and Mr. Bill Gosling showed guests to the pews.

A dinner for 23 guests was held at the Net Loft after the ceremony and later open house to 80 guests was held at the home of the groom's parents.

The bride's mother wore a pin-stripe silk dress in pink and grey with corsage of pink carnations and the groom's mother chose a figured blue silk dress and pink carnation corsage.

The young couple are making their home in Princeton where they are both members of the high school teaching staff.

Among out-of-town guests here for the wedding was Mrs. Beatrice Garraway, the groom's grandmother from Tisdale, Sask.

Galoshes To the Altar

DALLAS, Tex. (UPI)—Clifford Marshall Hall and his bride, Susan, are away on their honeymoon trip so the bride's father figured it was safe today to tell what happened.

It was a cold, wet day in Dallas last Saturday and Susan arrived at the Lovers' Lane Methodist Church with just enough time to check her veil and put the skirt of her satin and lace wedding dress.

H. G. Twyman, her father, offered his arm and with the first notes of the wedding march, they began down the aisle. Then the bride suddenly became aware that her dad was making a kind of gasping noise.

"Suzy," Twyman said he whispered, "You forgot to take off your galoshes."

Noble Families United

GENEVA (AP)—A 19-year-old Vermonth heiress of royal blood married a Spanish nobleman today in a sumptuous ceremony attended by southern Europe's ex-royalty.

Vittoria Marone Cinzano, nervous at first as photographers' flashbulbs popped, smiled happily as she emerged from the church leaning on the arm of the groom, Don Jose Carlos Alvarez de Toledo.

The cream of high aristocracy of Spain and Italy filled the pseudo-gothic church facing Geneva's central railroad station. The wedding took place at about the same time Princess Astrid of Norway was being married to a commoner in Oslo.

On hand for the marriage were the ex-queen of Spain, the pretender to the Spanish throne, Italy's last crown prince—and the bride's father, Italy's reigning Vermonth king.

The bride is the daughter of Enrico Marone Cinzano and a granddaughter of ex-queen Victoria Eugenia of Spain. The 30-year-old groom is a member of one of Spain's oldest noble families and an architect in Torremolinos, Spain.

Women Take Title Too Liberally

OTTAWA (CP)—The Liberal party isn't using quite the right term to refer to its national women's organization, Mrs. F. J. McMahon of Toronto complained Thursday.

They should be called women Liberals and definitely not Liberal women—the term used in party literature—she said at a meeting of the National Liberal Council.

"I don't like anybody calling me a liberal woman."

Louis Forgot Notes

OTTAWA (UPI)—Former Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent has confessed he couldn't write his memoirs because he didn't bother to keep notes during his 16 years in the House of Commons.

"I didn't keep any notes because I didn't think I'd be there long," he said.

"I wouldn't like to write anything without being accurate and I would have to read Hansard for the last 16 or 20 years," he told a service club meeting. "And I don't plan to do that."

St. Laurent, who will be 79 Feb. 1, was called to Ottawa to be the Quebec lieutenant of former prime minister Mackenzie King and stayed on to become his successor in 1949.

Outside Agitators Blamed

U.S. Orders Probe Into Campus Riot

ATHENS, Ga. (UPI)—The justice department ordered a preliminary investigation into mob actions at the newly-integrated University of Georgia yesterday and a federal judge voided a key state segregation law.

Attorney General William Rogers announced in Washington that the purpose of the probe was to determine whether any federal law had been violated in the rioting last night and the subsequent removal of two Negro students from the school.

He said the action was taken under a provision of the new 1960 Civil Rights Act which makes it a federal offense to impede or obstruct the carrying out of federal court orders.

Charlayne Hunter, 18, and Hamilton Holmes, 19, were ordered admitted to the 173-year-old university last Friday by federal Judge W. A. Rouse, who observed the two youths would have been admitted previously but for their race.

Both Miss Hunter and Holmes attended classes at the university for the first time Wednesday and were quietly accepted by most of their fellow students.

But they were temporarily suspended from the school and taken off campus early Thursday when an estimated 2,000 adults and students staged a riot which police broke up with tear gas.

Several students charged the rioting was caused by outside agitators and the Ku Klux Klan.

"Most of the students are ashamed of what went on last night," Terry Hazelwood, editor of the student paper said.

"Only a few caused the riot ... they were egged on by others. Most of the demonstrators were brought in."

Eight students and nine adults were arrested during the rioting. Eight of the adults were identified today as members of the Klan.

New Roof Sacrifices Old Pulpit

CHURCHILL, N.H. (UPI)—The parishioners of this Bedfordshire village (population 81) voted yesterday to sell their church pulpit to pay for repairs to the roof.

They need $5,000 to keep the roof out. The parochial council decided that they could raise money by selling their 16th century oak pulpit.

"It is too big for the church and is seldom used by preachers," church secretary Mrs. M. H. Barker said.

Copper Theft Admitted

Robert Davidson, no fixed address, pleaded guilty in city police court yesterday to theft of copper wire with an original value of $984, and was sentenced to 18 months in jail.

Police said accused, who has a record dating back to 1928, had sold 464 pounds of wire to a city junk firm Dec. 1, and a few days later had sold 775 pounds to a Vancouver firm.

When arrested, he had 800 pounds of the wire in his truck.

The wire was stolen from the B.C. Electric Co. yard on Pembroke.

Second charge against accused, of possession of stolen property, was withdrawn.

Harold Pearsall, 1224 Pembroke, charged with two counts of possession of stolen property worth more than $50, and one of property worth less than $50, was remanded in city court to Jan. 19 to fix a date for preliminary hearing.

No evidence was introduced on a third charge involving two counts of possession under $50 and the charge was withdrawn.

Fleming Warns Japan

'Flooding' Must Stop

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP)—Finance Minister Fleming said yesterday the government is determined that the flooding by Japanese products of "sensitive areas" of the Canadian market shall cease.

He also indicated, in a luncheon speech to the Kiwanis Club that quota controls imposed by Japan on some goods shipped to Canada have not prevented undue penetration of Canadian markets.

The government was seeking to correct this in current negotiations with Japan on 1961 quota levels.

Mr. Fleming said Canada accepts the principle of orderly growth of Japanese exports to Canada.

LOCAL INDUSTRY The only local industries in the Cayman Islands—a dependency of Jamaica—are turtle fishing, rope making and some shipbuilding.

Canada's goal was that in sales should be "about five to goods which are highly competitive with Canadian production, increases in Japanese duties is rising."

MORRISON'S

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower called on his successor Thursday to stick to principles which he said have kept the United States strong and free in a world menaced by the Communists.

Eisenhower, reviewing his eight years in office, said he did not wish to leave the impression that all is well, all problems solved.

CONTINUING THREAT
"Abroad," he said, "there is the continuing Communist threat to the freedom of Berlin, an explosive situation in Laos, the problems caused by Communist penetration of Cuba, as well as the many problems connected with the development of the new nations in Africa."

At home, he said, several conspicuous problems remain: "Promoting higher levels of employment, with special emphasis on areas in which heavy unemployment has persisted; continuing to provide for steady economic growth and preserving a sound currency."

BALANCED BUDGET
Eisenhower said the budget he will submit on Monday will be a "balanced one. It will be subject to changes by the Kennedy administration as well as by Congress."

The president said "startling strides" have been made in science and technology under his regime.

On defence, he said:

FIRST TIME
"For the first time in our nation's history we have consistently maintained in peacetime, military forces of a magnitude sufficient to deter and if need be to destroy predatory forces in the world."

On the home front, Eisenhower said incomes have risen and more houses have been built.

Joint Board Good Business For Victoria

Victoria is expected to save money in its 1961 budget through formation of a metropolitan health board, expected to become a reality early this year.

"The new metropolitan health board is in process of formation now, and it certainly should have an effect on the city council's budget discussions this spring," Mayor Percy Scurrell said this week.

Earlier he had said the city could save as much as $20,000 yearly, mainly in administration costs, by amalgamating Victoria - Esquimalt health board and Saanich and South Vancouver Island health unit.

Complete control over contributions to the board's budget would still be retained by every municipality, and each could withdraw from the plan on six months' notice.

Chiang Force Bombed

RANGOON (UPI)—The Burmese government said yesterday it is carrying out a massive offensive in the north with heavy fighting to dislodge Chinese Nationalist guerrilla forces, supporters of Chiang Kai-shek, operating in the border area for the past 11 years.

The army launched a twin-pronged offensive Dec. 30. The statement denied that any Chinese Communist forces were engaged in the offensive.

Girl, 14, Named Co-Respondent In Toronto Divorce Action

TORONTO (UPI)—A Toronto newspaper stated yesterday a 14-year-old girl has been named co-respondent in a divorce action. The reports says the wife of a Toronto businessman filed the suit, claiming that her husband had committed adultery with the girl on a number of occasions in 1959. At the time the girl was 12, the newspaper said.

Winning Contract

By HOWARD SCHENKEN and RICHARD L. FREY

Superstitious bridge players—few are not—will probably go to the movies today. Or, if they play it will be with a sense of impending doom and a feeling that if they are lucky enough to hold the good cards they will be unlucky enough to get the poor partners.

Here's an example of the kind of disaster which the player who makes a mistake is probably going to charge to the fact that January 13th fell on a Friday.

The worst possible disaster in bridge is when you let the opponents bid a game and make it while you could have gone on and made a game yourself. It isn't only the points you lose; it's the wreck of your partnership confidence.

South might have opened with one spade, in order to avoid the need to show great strength by reversing later. In that case, North-South would probably reach four spades without the heart suit ever being shown. As it was, when North correctly elected to bid two hearts rather than show his spade suit, the spades never did get mentioned and both East and West had less information at their command than if their opponents had shown the same kind of two-suited strength as they themselves did.

After winning the first diamond trick, West shifted to a club. East won and shifted back to diamonds. West made the very best play after winning the third trick for his side. He led a third round of diamonds, forcing dummy to trump. This forced declarer to guess the trump situation—but he was helped by East's double.

After trumping the third diamond, dummy's queen of hearts was cashed and the last trump led. South finessed the ten and, when it won, claimed the balance, making four hearts doubled. Then the East-West began.

West thought East should have bid five clubs. East thought that West's pass indicated interest in playing at four hearts doubled and didn't he, East, have four trumps to the jack to make things tough for declarer? We think West was right. East was looking at his singleton spade and could tell from the bidding that West must be short in hearts. He should have expected to make five clubs, or drive the opponents to the five level to save against the vulnerable game.

Garden Notes

Superstition or Fact?

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRMS

My neighbor Ernie insists that he is a completely civilized and intelligent man, without an ounce of superstition in his makeup, and to him, Friday the 13th is just another day. I challenged him on this the other day. "Look, Ernie," I said, "if you aren't superstitious, why did you go out in the middle of the road rather than walk under that ladder on Broad Street last Saturday? And when you split the salt at the Cunningham's Christmas party, why did you toss a pinch of it over your left shoulder?" "That isn't superstition," he scoffed. "I'm just careful, that's all. I just don't believe in taking any chances."

It is rather difficult to separate superstition from fact these days, and a superstition of today has a habit of becoming verified as a scientific fact the day after tomorrow. Fifty years ago, a common treatment for an inflamed sore was to apply a bread poultice. Twenty-five years ago, the medical men regarded the bread poultice as rank superstition. Today we treat infections with penicillin, derived originally from the blue mould on a piece of bread. I am wondering now if our use of the bread poultice didn't stem from some ancient and forgotten knowledge of its antibiotic properties.

One of the most powerful strains of penicillin in medicine was derived from a mouldy canteloupe found in an open-air fruit and vegetable market in St. Louis, Mo. Twenty centuries ago, the military surgeons of Caesar's armies were treating battle wounds with mouldy vegetables.

One area of superstition or fact on which gardeners are sharply divided concerns the practice of planting or sowing by the moon, and as yet, no clean-cut proof, one way or another, has turned up. This belief in moon planting is remarkably widespread and you find its advocates in every part of the world.

Many old-time gardeners in Europe wouldn't dream of putting a seed in the ground without first consulting an almanac, but it is difficult to find two of these moon-planters who agree on the correct phase of the moon for the various gardening operations.

In the islands of the South Pacific, the natives believe the sap flows upward with the waxing of the moon and downward during the wane. They believe that timber should be felled during the last quarter of the moon, otherwise the wood is too full of sap and attracts insect borers. They also believe that crops planted or sown during the first quarter of the moon put all their energy into topgrowth, while those planted in the last quarter thrive most strongly underground.

The Kanakas therefore plant corn, sugar cane, bananas and seedling nut palms during the time of the new moon, but yams, manioc and other root crops during the dark of the moon. Some white planters bear out these native beliefs and report that corn sown at the wrong time produces poor cobs, even in the most favorable weather.

None of the reputable scientific establishments have confirmed these beliefs and most of them dismiss the whole business as a lot of superstitious nonsense. The John Innes Horticultural Institute in England, though, took the problem seriously enough to run a series of controlled tests, but reported inconclusive results. The growth of plants differed with the phases of the moon, but so did the weather, and they couldn't pin anything down.

The boys at John Innes are some of the most open-minded plant scientists in the world, and I seem to detect a note of dissatisfaction in their report on the moon-planting experiment. All known theory points to the fact that the moon couldn't possibly exercise any influence on plant growth, but I wouldn't be surprised if we were to hear more about this as science advances our frontiers of knowledge.

Hollywood Today

By Sheila Graham

Who's Getting Inaugurated?

HOLLYWOOD (NANA)—This sounds unbelievable, but I'm informed that Frank Sinatra's wardrobe for the inauguration festivities for President Kennedy next week is costing him $65,000! Who's getting inaugurated, anyway? Everything Frankie will wear is of the very finest, with shoes handcrafted in Italy, the suits, supervised by Don Loper but made in London. The finest English hails. And his white tie and tails, for the evening will set Sinatra back $5,000. Must be made of gold and diamonds!

Hollywood should be calling soon on young Adam Faith, British actor just voted over there to have the most perfect face. Sophia Loren was the lady with the perfect ditto for the distaff side of the voting.

Spencer Tracy is said to be somewhat annoyed with the studio executive who docked his pay of one day's work when he attended the recent funeral of his friend, Clark Gable.

Jill St. John and billionaire husband Lance Reventlow are looking for an acre of land in Hawaii on which to build a pleasure retreat. You have to be a billionaire to buy an acre in Hawaii.

They were registered as Mr. and Mrs. Peter Viertel on the plane to Switzerland from London, but the passengers were Deborah Kerr and former husband Tony Martin. They were flying to Switzerland with their daughters, but on arrival there Tony went one way and Deb was greeted by new husband Mr. Viertel.

Brendan Behan is channeling his natural wit and charm into a night-club act. Instead of having a few drinks, and haranguing the cast and audiences, the talkative Irishman will appear at the "hungry I" in San Francisco—where Mort Sahl became famous. Brendan will be paid for being witty—a couple of thousand dollars weekly.

Ingrid Bergman has agreed to play the mother in the movie version of "Light in the Piazza." If the script is as good as the book, The MGM production will be filmed in Europe.

The Don Murray-Dolores Michaels romance is in the cooler, but Dolores is too busy preparing for "The Battle of Bloody Beach" with Audie Murphy and Gary Crosby, to cry for lost love. The movie will be made on Catalina Island, which looks a bit like the title when the tourists get through with it every summer.

When asked why he hasn't made a movie in almost a year, handsome Italian heartthrob Rossano Brazzi replied, "I haven't yet recovered from 'South Pacific.' Now, I wonder what he meant by that!"

Jean Pierre Aumont has a hit in France with his autobiography, "Souvenirs Provisoires." Jean Pierre tells about his marriage with the late fiery actress, Maria Montez, and of his years in Hollywood. I hope there's something about his present wife, pretty Marlene Pavan.

Well, sir, it seems that Maestro Stokowski did not break his hip while merely playing with his two small children. I hear that Stokowski was attempting a difficult yoga exercise when he slipped.

Viper in Bosom

In de Gaulle's Town

185 'Oui' Votes, One 'Non'

By PETER WORTHINGTON

COLOMBEY LES DEUX EGLISES, France (TNS)—This is probably the most puzzled and outraged village in France today.

It's a community 30 miles northwest of Paris that's nursing a serpent at its bosom. And no one knows who the serpent is.

Colombey is President de Gaulle's home.

In the recent referendum on Algeria 185 of the village's 186 voters said "Oui" to de Gaulle. But one person voted "Non!" And the village is in uproar. This is treason and it has happened before.

In the 1956 referendum on the new constitution, only one person voted against de Gaulle. The question torturing the village is who the persistent scoundrel is. No one has ever found out.

You'd Suspect the Butler If President Had One

I decided to play Hercule Poirot and find out.

Colombey is slow moving even for a French village.

Set amid rolling farmland, it's as picturesque as a postcard but a bit too tidy to be typically French.

There is only one church in the village. No one is sure why it's called Colombey les Deux Eglises. And no one cares.

It's the traitor who voted no that bothers citizens. I tried asking the mayor about it. He didn't or wouldn't understand me.

He immediately began raving in furious French when the subject was mentioned.

I think he thought I was accusing him.

After the single dissenting ballot in 1956, the prime suspect was de Gaulle's cook—called Fat Philomen.

It was alleged the general had scolded her about fish sauce and the vote was her revenge.

Philomen is still with the de Gaulles. She denies to the point of tears that she would do such a thing.

"You would suspect the butler—if the president had a butler," she sobbed, and rushed to the sanctuary of the kitchen.

After considerable sleuthing yesterday I could not crack the case.

It could have been the postman... or the village policeman... or the caretaker de Gaulle chided for letting a rose bush die...

It could have been an ex-soldier with a local reputation for going against popular opinion.

Some villagers feel they have a secret Communist in their midst.

The only person above suspicion is de Gaulle himself. He just isn't the type to cast such a ballot, no matter how annoyed he became at himself.

Meanwhile, as Colombey les Deux Eglises broods, the rest of France wonders how and when de Gaulle will start his plan of independence for Algeria.

'Should Protect Me'

London's Ladykiller

Court Keeps Splitting Heiresses

LONDON (UPI)—London's leading ladykiller complains that the law should protect him from poor little rich girls.

"They want to find out what makes me tick, and then they want to see if they can alter the timing," said Edward Langley.

Wavy-haired Langley, 29, has been barred by a court from seeing heiress Patricia Dunn, 19. They both say they are madly in love and Langley insists "this time" it's the real thing.

Patricia is the fourth girl in two years who has been protected by the courts from Langley's magnetic personality. Langley thought the legal action unnecessary.

"Rubbish," he snapped.

Man-About-Town-Houses Has Found True Love

"They should make me a ward of the court and ban all the little girls from seeing me. If I'm such a bad lad they should do that."

His trouble with Patricia, or rather Patricia's father, stemmed from exaggerated accounts of his escapades with his last, or was it his second-to-last, girl friend, heiress Lady Caragh Seymour le Poer Trench, Langley said.

"And as far as those other heiresses go," he said, "it wasn't my fault."

"It's my personality," the man-about-town houses said. "The stories get around. So the girls get curious. You know they become attracted to a chap with notoriety."

"I know many people won't believe me," Langley said, "but Pat is the first girl in my life who has managed to convince me it was time I settled down and raised a family."

Their reactions: He: "It's terrible to have your sweetheart in the same part of London and you can't see her."

I'm not after her money. I intend to keep her like any good husband."

She: "This thing will make us more determined to marry. I love Edward despite his past."

'Something Fishy' Sparks Probe Of Family Tragedy

MONTREAL (UPI)—A second inquest into the deaths of a mother and 11 of her 15 children was adjourned late yesterday pending a further probe into the tragedy.

Abel Vosburgh, 63, the husband and father of the victims was held for $200 bail on a coroner's warrant as a material witness.

The inquest was opened by Coroner J. H. Boileau earlier yesterday at Bedford, Que., in order to allow a six-man jury to view the remains of Mrs. Marjorie Vosburgh, 43, and 11 children which were discovered in the gutted remains of their one room, 20-by-15-foot, corrugated iron and wooden shack at Noyan, Que., Dec. 29.

Thieves Take Step to Left

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Albert Fols, a salesman for a wholesale shoe firm, reported to police that cases containing 339 shoes were stolen from his bar.

Two hours later the shoes were found in a truck where the thieves apparently had tossed them after opening the cases.

The shoes all were for the left foot.

The bodies, exhumed Wednesday were then taken to Montreal where provincial pathologists performed autopsies on them.

Vosburgh, a part-time laborer, held since last Saturday, was still in cells because the $200 bail had not been posted.

The first inquest, held the day after the fire, resulted in an accidental deaths verdict by a coroner's jury.

HEARD RUMORS

Insp. Jean Gauthier of the provincial police said the case was re-opened after Boileau first certified the deaths as accidental "because of the rumors we heard around Noyan."

"There were too many conflicting rumors and stories, we just couldn't ignore them. As far as I'm concerned, and of best until we know more, I'd have to say that something looks fishy," Insp. Gauthier said.

Insp. Gauthier explained that it was perfectly normal that the coroner should rule the deaths accidental under the circumstances.

RCMP Charges $400,000 Fraud

Packers Owners Arrested

WINNIPEG (CP)—Two Toronto businessmen were arrested and flown to Winnipeg Thursday night to face charges arising from last year's six-months strike at the meat plant of Brandon Packers Limited and a subsequent judicial inquiry.

Hugh Paton and D. Hubert Cox, principal owners of Great West Saddletry Limited which owns controlling interest of Brandon Packers, were charged with conspiracy to defraud. The charge involves $400,000 collected from Brandon Packers.

HELD OVERNIGHT

The men, under RCMP escort were expected to be held overnight and be arraigned Friday before Magistrate D. C. M. Kyle in provincial police court. Mr. Paton and Mr. Cox were arrested at the downtown Toronto offices of Great West Saddletry. It was the most sensational development so far in a dispute involving labor, management, the Manitoba government and the courts which has been going on since early in 1959.

TOOK CONTROL

Directors and officers of several companies, the two men took control of Brandon Packers in 1959.

Negotiations between local 255 of the United Packing House Workers of America (UHW) and the Brandon firm started in 1959 with the union demanding pay increases. The company contended it could not afford to raise pay.

Scoffs at Superstition

Girl Fights for Life Mother at Her Side

Victoria doctors fought to save the life of a three-year-old West Coast girl yesterday as RCMP officers continued an investigation into how the child received serious head injuries.

Meanwhile the girl's mother maintained an around the clock vigil at her bedside.

Leslie Hill, daughter of Bruce Hill, a logger who lives at Long Beach, between Ucluelet and Tofino, underwent a 2½-hour operation in Royal Jubilee Hospital yesterday afternoon.

Doctors found she had sustained "very severe concussion" although her skull was not fractured as was at first believed.

The child was unconscious for hours following the delicate operation, but did partially awake later last night.

AT BEDSIDE

Mrs. Donna Hill, 1539 Boucher, mother of the child, sat by the girl's bedside all yesterday and through last night. "I'm not going to sleep until they take her off the critical list," she vowed last night in Royal Jubilee Hospital.

"I stayed up with her for a week without sleep one time when she had the cramp and I'll do it again."

Mrs. Hill, divorced from the child's father 18 months ago, learned of Leslie's injury yesterday morning for the first time. She lives in Victoria with her mother, Mrs. Hazel Bergh, who works in the cafeteria at the hospital.

BOUSED ONCE

Leslie roused once last night from her unconscious state and appeared to recognize her mother.

"She half woke up," she said. "She came to once and looked at me and kind of smiled and took hold of my hand."

DRAINED BLOOD

Mrs. Hill was offered the chance to be with the child during the 2½-hour operation, but declined. Doctors drained a quantity of blood from inside the girl's skull.

Another child, Linda, 4½ years, lives with Mrs. Hill. The couple's third child, Lawrence Gordon, 2½, lives with his father at Long Beach.

VIEW TO UCLUELET

RCMP Staff Sgt. W. R. Morgan of Victoria flew to Ucluelet early yesterday afternoon to direct the investigation with Cpl. E. W. Steen, who is stationed in the West Coast town.

Investigations, which continued until late last night, were not completed. They will continue today.

Four Missing

Rescue Boats Capsize

SEATTLE (AP)—Coast guard headquarters said Thursday two of its vessels capsized in the mouth of the Columbia River. At least four men are believed missing. One of the vessels was identified as the 53-foot Triumph. The other was described as a 40-foot guard boat.

First reports said the 40-foot boat, identified only by number as 40564, was towing in a crab boat that had lost its ruder control.

As it transferred the tow to the triumph, both vessels apparently capsized.

A plane was on the scene dropping flares as a search for the missing men got underway.

Diefenbaker Reels In A Trophy

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker, who came to Jamaica for a rest and to "soak up some sun," already has a good tan and a 150-pound marlin to show for his vacation.

He has picked up the tan on the beach at Frenchman's Cove, the swanky resort run by Canadian millionaire Garfield Weston. He hooked the marlin while trolling home from a visit to Kingston Tuesday.

$1,250,000 in Gold 'Mined' by Robbers

TIMMINS, Ont. (CP)—The Press says in a copyrighted story that at least $1,250,000 in gold was stolen by miners from nine of the 11 operating gold mines in the Porcupine area during 1960.

The gold, stolen in the form of high-grade ore and later refined, was smuggled into black markets in Europe and the Orient through "racket houses" in Montreal, the paper said.

Black Rejects Chest Plan To Talk Welfare Problems

Welfare Minister Wesley D. Black yesterday rejected a proposal from Vancouver's Community Chest Council that a three-day conference be held to discuss charges of a breakdown in B.C. welfare services.

"I am greatly surprised that they released this letter to the press before I received it," said the minister, who has adopted a "no comment" attitude throughout the rapidly-growing controversy.

TWO CONFERENCES

"We've had two conferences between my own administration and municipal people during the past month and I don't see how a further meeting could be of any use," he said.

Meanwhile a Social Credit backbencher urged that the legislative committee on social welfare thoroughly investigate the accusations made by former B.C. superintendent of child welfare Miss Ruby McKay.

NOT CONVINCED

"I am not convinced that the welfare department has done a 100 per cent job," said Bert Price, S.C. Vancouver-Burrard.

"I don't think facilities are provided to take care of all that should be taken care of," added Mr. Price who was chairman of the social welfare committee at the last session.

"The only way to find out these things is to have an investigation."

ALL IN FAVOR

The member said he was all in favor of having a legislative committee investigation because people had confidence in such studies.

Boy's Body Washed Up On Beach

VANCOUVER (CP)—The body of eight-year-old James Carr, who disappeared on his way home from school during a rainstorm Tuesday, was found washed up on a West Vancouver beach Thursday night.

The boy is believed to have been swept in his death through five blocks of an underground culvert.

He apparently fell into an open ditch which runs into the culvert while walking the 2½ blocks home from school.

Discovery of the body ended a continuous search for the boy since Tuesday night.

FORREST L. SHAW

Saanich Charge Pending

By TED HARRIS

A Saanich boy will be charged with attempted murder in Saanich juvenile court this morning following the beating and stabbing yesterday of a 15-year-old girl.

Carolyn Yates, 5915 Old West Road, was in satisfactory condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital last night with a scalp wound and one stab wound in her stomach.

BOY ARRESTED

A juvenile was arrested by police about 7 p.m. while sitting in Carolyn's parents' car as they visited their daughter in hospital.

After the beating and stabbing on a rock bluff near the Yates home, a boy accompanied the girl home to her mother, Mrs. A. L. Yates said.

OFF TO VISIT

Mrs. Yates said Carolyn, on the shift system at Mount Newton Junior High School, came home for lunch at 2 p.m. and worked on homework until 3:30 p.m.

"Then she said she was going up to visit a girl friend up the road," the mother said.

BEGAN TO SCREAM

Only minutes later Mrs. Yates went outside to bring in the washing and saw Carolyn stumbling up the driveway with a youth.

"When she got near she began to scream, 'I'm going to die—I'm going to die,' then lifted her hand from her stomach and screamed, 'look, look,'" Mrs. Yates said.

SEES BLOOD

"Her jacket and white sweater were covered in blood. All I could think to do was tell her to lay down."

A nearby doctor was called along with the Saanich police ambulance and the girl was rushed to hospital.

TOO TERRIFIED

"Carolyn seemed too terrified to tell the police or the doctor what had happened," Mrs. Yates added.

"In the hospital she broke down and told me her story," Mrs. Yates said.

DIDN'T KNOW

"At first she didn't know she had been stabbed, she thought the sharp pains were only twigs lashing against her stomach in the struggle."

No weapon was found before dark, police said.

Child's Limbless Body Near Fire Site

NOYAN, Que. (UPI)—The discovery of a child's limbless body near the ruins of a tiny shack where the charred remains of 12 members of one family were found late last month, last night touched off one of the most intensive police investigations in the province's history. (See also Page 5.)

A bakery deliveryman, making his late afternoon rounds, discovered the body buried in a half-foot of snow about 25 feet from the gutted 15-by-20 foot shack where the bodies of Mrs. Abel Vosburgh, 43, and 11 of her 15 children were found during the early hours of Dec. 29 after the structure burned to the ground.

The lone survivor of the early morning fire, Abel Vosburgh, 63, husband and father of the victims, remained in a cell in provincial police headquarters in Montreal on a coroner's warrant holding him as a material witness. He was held on $200 bail which was not raised immediately.

Floods Drop, Tempers Rise In North Cowichan Dispute

NORTH COWICHAN — Flood waters in Cowichan have receded but the temper of a Beverley Street resident was still high yesterday at a suggestion he and others took a chance when they bought houses in a low area.

Andy Anand, 2402 Beverley, said in his opinion "the council is at fault, not us. They know more than us and yet they approved the subdivision."

But residents in the area were happy to hear that rough plans of a sewage system for the area northeast of Duncan had been prepared before the flooding.

Seven properties including Mr. Anand's had been covered with flood water, causing septic tanks to flood out when the runoff from nearby Somers Creek spilled over the area for the second year in a row.

AWFUL CHANCE

Reeve Donald Morton commented that "if houses are built in a low area the purchasers are taking an awful chance."

"We had the plans (for the sewer system) and were prepared to talk about them at a ratepayers' meeting in December, but no one from the area was present," he said.

He added that he had received a complaint about sewage from a resident in the area, but when he asked for it in writing so council could discuss it the person did not write.

The area had been an excellent pasture six years ago and was "subject to flooding," the reeve said.

AREA WARNED

Already health officials had warned the municipality that sanitation in the area was "not in good condition."

Householder Anand said that "if the municipality did not give permission for the subdivision and did not give approval to build we would not have bought."

He said a delegation will be present at the next council meeting.

The reeve said he will welcome a discussion on the subject.

Highways officials said that more than 50 loads of boulders were dumped into a 12-foot hole on the eastern approach to Clemensmaltz bridge at Cowichan Bay and had stopped erosion.

Daily Colonist, Victoria, Friday Jan. 13, 1961

Flood Area Warned In Nanaimo

NANAIMO — The Central Vancouver Island medical health officer has issued a warning to householders whose homes or water supply might have been flooded by recent downpours.

Dr. C. J. G. MacKenzie said flooding could have caused contamination of wells and other water sources. He advised people living in areas where there was flooding to boil or chlorinate their drinking water. Dr. MacKenzie said that specific information on protection of water supplies is available at the central Vancouver Island health unit.

Borrowing Extension Requested

LADYSMITH — District 67 school board has decided to apply to the department of education for an extension of borrowing power on a construction referendum to Dec. 31, 1963, in order to finish projects still in hand. Authority expired Dec. 31, 1961.

Evidence of increased interest by the department in the need for more vocational schools in seven in a decision to send a team of vocational experts into the field to survey the situation, according to Trustee Alex Smith.

He said they will survey Fairbridge Farm school as a possible centre, and recommended that the board "go along with this" and notify the department of its approval.

Trustee Smith has been in constant touch with trustees in south midland in pressing for a vocational school to serve the needs of the district.

It would not be the heavy machinery type of school, he explained. A vocational school for the area was listed as a pressing need at an educational conference held last year.

Board members expressed satisfaction that the examination centres at Duncan and Nanaimo adequately meet Ladysmith's requirements.

New Leader Takes Over

Kinsmen Work For Children At Ladysmith

LADYSMITH — A volunteer work party of Kinsmen started this week with hammer, saw and plywood, to finish the interior of a downstairs room at the new health centre building so the retarded children's Happy Lark school can move in as soon as possible.

Kinettes are taking turns providing coffee and snacks for the busy crew.

The upstairs floor, which houses the entire health centre, was officially opened recently.

Finishing the downstairs floor, which will house both the retarded children's school, senior citizens' lounge, and other facilities for the public, is a do-it-yourself proposition on the part of Kinsmen to conserve funds.

Germans Jailed, Loot Recovered

CHEMAINUS — An intensive RCMP investigation here ended yesterday with jail sentences for three German sailors and the location of loot valued at over $2,200.

Arrested after their ship, the German freighter Klaus Schoke, was due to sail were Manfred Kuchler, 20, and Heinz Saatoff, 24, after a lightning raid on the vessel. The ship was held here, pending police investigation.

The two seamen pleaded guilty to breaking, entering and theft yesterday and were each sentenced to a year in jail. Klaus Jurgan Kirsten, 20, was fined $150 and sentenced to two days in jail for car theft.

Police spent several hours searching the ship at the Millan, Bloedel and Powell River Co. dock where it was taking on lumber, but nothing was found and police left.

Later in the afternoon police swooped down again and found articles from the store in various parts of the ship and in crew members' lockers and baggage.

TAKEN AWAY
About 5 a.m. the two sailors were arrested and taken ashore.

Police said that merchandise valued at $178 was taken along with a locked portable cabinet containing papers valued at $2,000. All of it was recovered except the cabinet and contents which had been dropped over the ship's side. The cabinet was valued at $50.

Divers will attempt to recover the cabinet and papers later today.

Rescue Boats Capsize

SEATTLE (AP)—Coast guard headquarters said Thursday two of its vessels capsized in the mouth of the Columbia River. At least six men are believed missing.

One of the vessels was identified as the 53-foot Triumph. The other was described as a 40-foot guard boat.

First reports said the 40-foot boat, identified only by number as 4054, was towing in a crab boat that had lost its rudder control.

As it transferred the tow to the Triumph, both vessels apparently capsized.

A plane was on the scene dropping flares as a search for the missing men got under way.

Diefenbaker Reels In A Trophy

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker, who came to Jamaica for a rest and to "soak up some sun," already has a good ten and a 100-pound marlin to show for his vacation.

He has picked up the top on the beach at Frenchman's Cove, the swanky resort run by Canadian millionaire Garfield Weston. He hooked the marlin while trolling home from a visit to Kingston Tuesday.

CHILD'S LIMBLESS BODY NEAR FIRE SITE
NOYAN, Que. (UPI)—The discovery of a child's limbless body near the ruins of a tiny shack where the charred remains of 12 members of one family were found late last month, last night touched off one of the most intensive police investigations in the province's history. (See also Page 26.)

A bakery deliveryman, making his late afternoon rounds, discovered the body buried in a half-foot of snow about 25 feet from the gutted 15-by-20-foot shanty where the bodies of Mrs. Abel Veenburgh, 43, and 11 of her 15 children were found during the early hours of Dec. 29 after the structure burned to the ground.

The lone survivor of the early morning fire, Abel Veenburgh, 63, husband and father of the victims, remained in a cell in provincial police headquarters in Montreal on a coroner's warrant holding him as a material witness. He was held on $200 bail which was not raised immediately.

Car Crash Follows

ROSSLAND, B.C. (CP)—A frantic father suffered severe burns Wednesday night as he tried unsuccessfully to get through a wall of fire to reach his three children trapped in their burning home.

The man's grief-stricken wife crashed a car into a ditch trying to get her husband to hospital from their farm at Sheep Creek, six miles north of this community, 10 miles west of Trail.

ONLY CHILDREN
Dead are William, 5, Robert, 4, and John, 3, only children of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Thorpe.

Police Arrest Youth

By TED HARRIS

A Saanich boy will be charged with attempted murder in Saanich juvenile court this morning following the beating and stabbing yesterday of a 15-year-old girl.

Carolyn Yates, 5615 Old West Road, was in satisfactory condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital last night with a scalp wound and one stab wound in her stomach.

BOY ARRESTED
A juvenile was arrested by police about 7 p.m. while sitting in Carolyn's parents' car as they visited their daughter in hospital.

After the beating and stabbing on a rock bluff near the Yates home, a boy accompanied the girl home to her mother. Mrs. A. L. Yates said.

OFF TO VISIT
Mrs. Yates said Carolyn, on the shift system at Mount Newton Junior High School, came home for lunch at 1 p.m. and worked on homework until 3:30 p.m.

"Then she said she was going up to visit a girl friend up the road," the mother said.

BEGAN TO SCREAM
Only minutes later Mrs. Yates went outside to bring in the washing and saw Carolyn stumbling up the driveway with a youth.

"When she got near she began to scream, 'I'm going to die—I'm going to die,' then lifted her hand from her stomach and screamed, 'look, look,'" Mrs. Yates said.

SEEN BLOOD
"Her jacket and white sweater were covered in blood. All I could think to do was tell her to lay down."

A nearby doctor was called along with the Saanich police ambulance and the girl was rushed to hospital.

TOO TERRIFIED
"Carolyn seemed too terrified to tell the police or the doctor what had happened," Mrs. Yates added.

"In the hospital she broke down and told me her story," Mrs. Yates said.

DIDN'T KNOW
"At first she didn't know she had been stabbed, she thought the sharp pains were only twigs lashing against her stomach in the struggle."

No weapon was found before dark, police said.

Accused Slayer Committed

NELSON (CP)—Charged with the murder of grand daughter Nina Perepalkin, Mrs. Mary Legechukoff, 56, of Glade was committed to the provincial mental hospital at Esquimalt for treatment by order-in-council of the B.C. government, it was learned Thursday.

NOT CONVINCED
"I am not convinced that the welfare department has done a 100 per cent job," said Bert Price, S.C. Vancouver-Burrard.

"I don't think facilities are provided to take care of all that should be taken care of," added Mr. Price who was chairman of the social welfare committee at the last session.

"The only way to find out these things is to have an investigation."

ALL IN FAVOR
The member said he was all in favor of having a legislative committee investigation because people had confidence in such studies.

Girl Fights for Life Mother at Her Side

Victoria doctors fought to save the life of a three-year-old West Coast girl yesterday as RCMP officers continued an investigation into how the child received serious head injuries.

Meanwhile the girl's mother maintained a round-the-clock vigil at her bedside. Leslie Hill, daughter of Bruce Hill, a logger who lives at Long Beach, between Ucluelet and Todina, underwent a 24-hour operation in Royal Jubilee Hospital yesterday at term.

Doctors found she had sustained "very severe concussion" although her skull was not fractured as was at first believed.

The child was unconscious for hours following the delicate operation, but did partially awake later last night.

AT BEDSIDE
Mrs. Donna Hill, 1530 Boucher, mother of the child, sat by the girl's bedside all yesterday and through last night.

"I'm not going to sleep until they take her off the critical list," she vowed last night in Royal Jubilee Hospital.

"I stayed up with her for a week without sleep one time when she had the croup and I'll do it again."

Mrs. Hill, divorced from the child's father 18 months ago, learned of Leslie's injury yesterday morning for the first time. She lives in Victoria with her mother, Mrs. Hazel Bergh, who works in the cafeteria at the hospital.
